PARKER NOMINATED ON FIRST BALLOT AFTER AN ALL-NIGHT BATTLE

HOT FIGHT FOR 2D PLACE

John Sharp Williams, Senator Daniel of Virginia, and Gov. Beckham of Kentucky the Leaders—Nomination of Parker Came After Bryan Had Made the Greatest Fight Ever Seen in a National Convention—Vice-Presidential Nominations This Afternoon.

By Boston American Leased Wire.

CONVENTION HALL, ST. LOUIS, JULY 9.—CANDIDATES FOR THE NOMINATION FOR VICE-PRESIDENT TOOK UP THE CANVASS FOR VOTES IMMEDIATELY AFTER THE CONVENTION TOOK A RECESS TO-DAY, AND WERE BUSY ALL FORENOON, DESPITE THE FACT THAT THE MAJORITY OF THE DELEGATES HAD GONE TO THEIR ROOMS TO SLEEP. THE VICE-PRESIDENTIAL BOOMERS PURSUED THE LEADERS AND DELEGATES TO BEDROOMS AND TURKISH BATHS, SECURING PLEDGES. A RED HOT FIGHT FOR THE PLACE IS NOW ON.

SENATOR DANIEL, OF VIRGINIA, IS STILL AMONG THE LEADERS IN THE RACE FOR THE VICE-PRESIDENTIAL NOMINATION. HIS BOOM, HOWEVER, HAS RECEIVED SOMEWHAT OF A SETBACK SINCE IT BECAME KNOWN THAT HE MADE A VIOLENT ATTACK ON BRYAN DURING THE PLATFORM DISCUSSION IN THE COMMITTEE ON RESOLUTIONS.

JOHN SHARP WILLIAMS, OF MISSISSIPPI, TEMPORARY CHAIRMAN OF THE CONVENTION AND MINORITY LEADER ON THE FLOOR OF THHE HOUSE OF REPRESENTATIVES, IS ANOTHER WHOSE CLAIMS WILL BE URGED BEFORE THE CONVENTION. THE BOOM FOR GOVERNOR BECKHAM, OF KENTUCKY, IS IN FULL SWING, AND THE AGENTS OF SENATOR TILLMAN, OF SOUTH CAROLINA; CAPTAIN RICHMOND PEARSON HOBSON, AYCOCK, OF NORTH CAROLINA; TAGGART, OF INDIANA, AND FOLK, OF MISSOURI ,ARE ACTIVE.

From present indications a Southern man will be selected for the candidate. Mr. Taggart will probably be satisfied with the chairmanship of the National Committee. Captain Hobson is an advocate of the nomination of Folk, and Joseph Daniels, of North Carolina, is chief boomer for Aycock, of that State.

The nominations for Vice-President will begin when the convention recovenes this afternoon at 3 o'clock, Boston time. Immediately after adjournment this morning the delegates, worn out with their all-night struggle, repaired to their rooms and went to sleep to get rested up for the afternoon's work.

WALL A LIKELY ONE.

It was reported this afternoon that the leaders are struggling to select a vice-presidential candidate acceptable to Parker—a central Western man by preference, and many of them want Wall. It is declared the Wisconsin man can have the place if he will accept, but despite this trade, scores of other names are being mentioned. Among them,

PARKER HEARD NEWS AFTER MORNING SWIM

EMERGING FROM THE HUDSON WHEN TOLD HE WAS DEMOCRACY'S CHOICE.

By Boston American Leased Wire.

ESOPUS, N. Y., July 9.—Judge Alton B. Parker was unofficially notified of his nomination by the Democratic party for President at 6:48 o'clock this morning, while bathing in the Hudson River, by a reporter for the Evening Journal. Judge Parker was in the water when the reporter, with a special telegram in his hand, rushed down to the bank and yelled to him.

"Judge Parker," he shouted to the distinguished jurist, who was swimming fifty feet from the shore, "you have been unanimously nominated by the convention."

Judge Parker stopped swimming.

"Is that so," he said.

Judge Parker swam ashore and started for his home, where he dressed. On his way to the house he decided not to make any statement until he is officially notified of his nomination.

"I will have nothing to say," he said in answer to all questions, "until I receive an official notification of the work of the convention."

No Statement Just Yet.

"Will you," he was asked, "in your statement define your position on the money question?"

"I will only say what will be in that statement when I give it out," was the answer.

Mrs. Parker had not risen when the telegram came that her husband had been nominated, and was not up when he returned from his dip. Judge Parker said that he would not allow her to be disturbed.

It was a long, weary wait during the night for the newspaper reporters, villagers and Judge Parker's secretary on the stoop of the Parker residence. The last bulletin was received from St. Louis at 9:45 o'clock last night, when Judge Parker retired. He gave instructions that he was not to be disturbed during the night by anything that the convention might do.

Waited All Night Long.

His secretary, Arthur McCausland, the newspaper men, and some of the inhabitants of Esopus who feel that they share the honor which has been conferred on their fellow-townsman, sat on the stoop throughout the night and waited for word from the convention. The newspaper men and Mr. McCausland smoked and told stories until 6 o'clock this morning, when Judge Parker arose and started for the

SAVE STEAMER, WANT SALVAGE

The Austrian Libelled by the Metropolitan Coal Company as Result of Fire.

The first salvage suit growing out of the fire at the Mystic wharves was commenced to-day, when the Metropolitan Coal Company filed with the clerk of the United States District Court a libel against the steamship Austrian, brought to recover salvage for services rendered by the tug Metropolitan in towing the steamship out of danger and saving the lives of the captain and many of the crew.

No specific sum is named in the libel.

OLNEY SMILES OVER DEFEAT

FALMOUTH, July 9.—Richard Olney, who is staying at his Summer home here, when notified of the nomination of Judge Parker, declined to make any statement in the way of comment.

Mr. Olney left his breakfast table to hear the news, to which he listened in silence. When the reporter spoke of the fact that Mr. Olney had received four votes of the Maine delegation, and one from Nebraska, the candidate smiled, but that was the only expression of any kind during the interview.

CLEVELAND IS GRATIFIED

BUZZARDS BAY, July 9.—Ex-President Grover Cleveland received the news of the nomination of Judge Parker at the Summer residence of Joseph Jefferson, where he is a guest. Through a son of Mr. Jefferson he sent out the following statement:

"I am in absolute ignorance of the action of the St. Louis convention except in so far as it has nominated Mr. Parker as presidential candidate. With this result I am abundantly gratified, and I hope that the remainder of the work of the convention will add to the encouraging prospects of Democratic success.

"I do not know when I shall have the opportunity to read the platform adopted, or to learn of the entire proceedings of the convention."

PORT ARTHUR'S SECOND LINE OF DEFENCE FALLS

Japs Sustain Heavy Loss, but Tighten Grip on Citadel.

OKU CAPTURES KAI-PING

LONDON, July 9.—Paris reports that messages received in St. Petersburg state that the Japs, after suffering considerable loss, have succeeded in capturing the second line of defences at Port Arthur.

From earlier reports from the various points at the seat of the war it is generally conceded that the Japs are within five miles of the beleaguered city with siege guns mounted on commanding heights and sending shot and shell against the citadel's redoubts.

Additional troops and artillery are being landed at Figer and Pigeon Bays, while Togo with a fleet augmented to fifty ships is pursuing the blockade against the Port.

The Russian garrison, according to French refugees at Chefoo, includes 40,000 men. The Russians have mounted 700 guns on the heights north of the city with which to oppose the Japanese advance.

KAI-PING TAKEN BY OKU'S ARMY

LONDON, July 9.—The Japanese, according to a Tokio dispatch this morning, have strengthened their offensive operation against Kuropatkin and the Russian army by the capture by General Oku of Kai-Ping or Kai-Chou.

The announcement from the Japanese capital says that severe fighting ensued for several hours, in which the Russian and Japanese losses were heavy. The battle ended with the Japs' occupation of Kai-Ping.

An earlier dispatch from the Tokio correspondent of the Chronicle says the Japanese captured ten guns and fifty prisoners near Kai-Chou. This is undoubtedly an incident to the fight in which General Oku's men captured Kai-Ping.

From other information from the war zone the Japanese activity in northern Liao-Tung peninsula is increasing. General Kellert's men are engaged in a heavy Japanese force holding the Feng-Wang-Cheng roads to Liao-Yang, and there is constant skirmishing near Dalin Pass.

It is asserted that General Kuroki is busy forming companies of Chunhuses under Japanese leaders to attack the railroad about Mukden.

The war office confirms the reports of the Japanese advance toward Kai-Chou, but is inclined to regard the movement as a demonstration south while changing the disposition of troops to make an attack elsewhere.

The military expert of the Russkyia Vedomosti believes General Kuropatkin has now decided to accept a general engagement near Liao-Yang.

OFFERS HOME TO GIRL WHO TRIED SUICIDE

SOCIETY WOMAN WILL PLACE NELLIE CURTIN IN INSTITUTION TILL HER MAJORITY.

NELLIE CURTIN.

GIRL WHO ATTEMPTED SUICIDE.

After reading in the papers of the attempted suicide of seventeen-year-old Nellie Curtin, of Maiden, a woman prominent in social and charitable affairs of Boston made application to her parents whereby she was to be given in charge of some institution where she would receive good care until she reached her majority.

At the Melrose Hospital, where the girl was taken after being found unconscious in Pine Bank Park yesterday, it was declared to-day that she would recover, and that she would be able to leave the hospital on Monday.

Mrs. Tina McPherson, the young chum of Nellie Curtin, denied to-day that any suicide compact existed between Nellie Curtin and herself. Mrs. McPherson, though but seventeen years old, has been married three years, but since Christmas she has been living with an aunt in Malden, where she was at the time she met Nellie Curtin.

It is claimed in Malden that the reason of the attempted suicide was the girl's wild infatuation for Ralph Hatch, of Melrose Highlands. Hatch is nineteen years old, and has been Nellie's playmate for three years.

SCHOOL BOYS HOME, BRING GOLD MEDAL

Captain Farrell Hero of Boston Athletes Who Were Guests of Congressman Hearst.

GIVEN A ROYAL WELCOME

Fresh from their achievements in the great interscholastic athletic meet at St. Louis, held under the auspices of Congressman William Randolph Hearst, the Boston boys were given a royal welcome when their train pulled into the North Station a little before 8 o'clock this morning.

The station rang with the cheers of a multitude of friends. Many of the boys' parents were in the crowd, and a touch of affection was added to the boisterous welcome.

On the way from St. Louis the boys drew up the following resolution, which will be presented to Mr. Hearst:

BOSTON, July 9, 1904.

To Congressman William Randolph Hearst:

We the undersigned members of the Hearst St. Louis track team of Boston schoolboys hereby express our sincere appreciation of your kindness and generosity in affording us the opportunity of visiting the World's Fair and of representing Boston in the Public School athletic contest.

We believe that your material encouragement will be a great stimulus to the promotion of schoolboy athletics throughout the land. Signed, William D. Farrell, A. Anderson, William Cronin, Paul Hayes, Horace Seaver, James L. Fish, H. M. Landesman, Thomas A. Scanlon, John J. Norton, Michael J. Rutledge, Michael L. Dorgan, Leslie Schwartz, George L. Atkins, N. A. Sherman, Nathanial Alovski, Leslie McCormack, Nathan Feerstein, John O'Brien, John Libby, Arthur G. Lowell.

All the boys were in excellent spirits and in the best of health. There was not an accident of any kind, and the lads were in the pink of health during the entire trip. Only nineteen of the party returned this morning, Arthur Lowell remained in St. Louis visiting relatives.

William D. Farrell, captain of the team, was the hero of the demonstration this morning. Farrell won the gold medal which went to the winner of the mile race. He was cheered to the echo.

MYSTERY OF MISSING BOY GROWS DEEPER

Father of Young McGlauflin, of Watertown, Scouts Theory That He Went to Sea.

The parents of fourteen-year-old Hiram McGlauflin, of Watertown, who mysteriously disappeared from his home June 17, are still searching anxiously for some trace of their son, although the police have acknowledged that their four-weeks' work on the case has been without avail.

Mr. McGlauflin, who is a prominent figure in Watertown, scouts the theory that Hiram went to New York and there shipped on an ocean steamer for England. There are people, however, who knew the boy well, who believe that this is just what he did.

With a Boston & Maine mileage book containing 700 miles, a few dollars in change, and an extension bag containing some clothes, Hiram left his home at No. 16 Summer street, and since then he has not been heard from. Five days later, Mr. McGlauflin found the boy's diary lying on the grass under the dining-room window.

Mr. McGlauflin said to an AMERICAN reporter to-day: "I don't know whether I shall ever see Hiram again. He was a good boy, and I don't know of any reason why he should want to leave me.

"No, I don't think that he has met with foul play. If he had we would have heard something about it before now, because he had his bankbook with him which would have identified him."

SUES RICH CLUBMAN FOR WIFE'S LOST LOVE

"It was a statement by her sister that first made me suspect Stockton and my wife. I believe he stole the love of my wife, and I have asked the courts to make him pay me for the injury he has done me."

John J. McGuirk, a Gloucester barber, who formerly lived in Boston, emphasizes this declaration by a suit against Fred W. Stockton, a lawyer, who is prominent in financial and club circles, with a suit for $20,000 damages. The action was brought in Middlesex county, because Mr. Stockton has large property interests in Cambridge. As it is claimed that the property is in the name of a relative, Rollo E. Stockton, the latter is named in the special attachment filed for the suggy husband by Lawyer Samuel F. Rosonsky.

Mr. Stockton is about sixty years old, but, although thirty years older than Mrs. McGuirk, the husband of the woman believes it did not prevent her from having undue affection for the wealthy lawyer. McGuirk says he does not know where the man he seeks to mulct for $20,000 is going, but he would not be surprised if he was making his annual visit to Sussex, N. J., where he owns valuable real estate. It is the wife of Mrs. John Guirk, and she is revisiting scenes of her childhood with her twelve-year-old son.

She is twenty-eight years old, and her husband believes that her beauty and accomplishments won the admiration of another man.

If the case comes to trial Mr. McGuirk's allegations are likely to startle the friends of persons most concerned in the law suit. Evidence may be offered regarding the gift of a lodging house at No. 9 Concord square, this city, as well as visits to No. 8 Allston street and to an antique furniture store in Cambridge. It is possible that some interesting letters may be offered for reading by the court. When Mr. McGuirk talked of his domestic infelicity he said:

"I had no suspicions until my sister-in-law made a terrible accusation against Mrs. McGuirk during a quarrel.

"My wife and Hilda, her sister, quarreled over a young man who was paying attention to the latter.

Spoke in a Rage.

"While in a rage, Hilda impulsively said to me, 'Florence is not true to you, John.'

"'What are you saying,' I replied in amazement. 'I will never believe that until I have proof.'

"Then Hilda answered, 'Everything in the house belongs to Florence. Old Stockton furnished it and the story about the rich woman was made to deceive you.'

"I confronted my wife with this statement, asking, 'Is this true, Florence?' She denied it."

AUTO HURT MEN TO SAVE WOMEN

Special to the Boston American.

ATTLEBORO, July 9.—To save the lives of his wife and sister-in-law from almost certain death, Henry Lynd, a Pawtucket clothing merchant, ran his heavy automobile at full speed into a buggy at South Attleboro, thus barely escaping a rapidly approaching Inter-State electric car.

The buggy was wrecked, and John Mortell, a North Attleboro jeweller, is suffering from concussion of the brain. The other occupant, Stanley Roguski, was severely bruised.

Mrs. Lynd was badly frightened, and her sister, Miss Callahan, fainted.

CHIN HERE ON BOGUS PAPERS

The arrest of Chin Don Yie, a Chinese laborer, charged with being unlawfully in this country, brings to light another alleged forged certificate of former discharge by a Vermont commissioner.

Yin, who keeps a laundry at Marlboro, when arrested by Chinese Inspector McCabe produced what at first appeared to be a genuine certificate made out in the name of Wok Hong Wang. The paper bore the signature and seal of George E. Johnson, United States commissioner at Burlington, Vt., dated October 27, 1898. On the upper left-hand corner of the document was pasted the photograph of Yin. Over the picture was what purported to be the reality said to be a forgery.

Before Commissioner Fisher to-day Yin pleaded not guilty and bail was placed at $200. The case was continued one week.

GATES MAY END WAR IN COPPER

By Boston American Leased Wire.

NEW YORK, July 9.—John W. Gates, who in the last five years has figured in many Wall Street deals, has assumed a new role, that of peacemaker in the copper warfare of Montana.

Mr. Gates has been negotiating with Amalgamated Copper officials with a view to selling control of the United Copper Company, now held by Heinze and his friends, to Amalgamated. If he accomplishes this, thousands of lawsuits started in all parts of the country will be settled, the bitter political feud in Montana will stop and the copper war which has cost millions of dollars and hundreds of lives will give way to industrial harmony.

Mr. Gates has held many conferences with H. H. Rogers, president of Amalgamated, and William Rockefeller, a director.

The stumbling block in the negotiations heretofore has been the value of Mr. Heinze's properties. When Amalgamated was formed it was to put the Heinze price in cash as evidence of faith, and should any profit which the syndicate might make. He refused. Subsequently, it is said, he valued his properties at $15,000,000.

SUSPECT FOUL PLAY IN SCHROON LAKE MYSTERY

PEOPLE ON BOAT THINK YOUNG MAN MAY HAVE PUSHED MRS. SHOMO OVER.

Glens Falls (N. Y.) police believe that some one in Boston has made an attempt to obtain possession of the body and valuable jewels of Mrs. Angeline Shomo, of New York, who was drowned in Schroon Lake last Saturday. Last evening there came a telephone call for the Glens Falls coroner from a Mrs. Hunter, in Boston, who gave a fictitious address, No. 62 Notre Dame street.

She said Mrs. Shomo was her daughter and ordered the coroner to send word to her as soon as the body was found. The coroner learned later, say dispatches to the AMERICAN, that there is no Notre Dame street in Boston and decided not to send the body to Mrs. Hunter until satisfactory proof of a claim on the remains is furnished.

Mrs. Shomo, a beautiful woman of apparent means, went to Schroon Lake in the Adirondacks last Friday. When she arrived at the Taylor House she met a well-dressed young man. They had a quarrel and left.

The next morning Mrs. Shomo went to Riverside and when she was attempting in the evening by steamboat she either fell into the lake or jumped overboard. No one saw her go overboard, but an officer missed her just before landing. She had been sitting near the rear railing.

The young man is also missing, and many people who saw the couple think there has been foul play. A search for the woman's body has been fruitless.

ROOSEVELT HEARS NEWS

OYSTER BAY, N. Y., July ,—President Roosevelt received the news of Judge Parker's telegram of congratulations this morning by telephone from Secretary Loeb, who communicated the news to his chief from his office here.

"We're at least know where we stand," was Secretary Loeb's caustic remark when he was pressed for an expression of opinion. At the executive offices it is believed that the St. Louis convention will name a man for Vice-President.

John C. Kern, once Democratic candidate for Indiana governorship, was suggested as a likely man to go on ticket with Judge Parker.

LID WILL BE ON AT REVERE

"If any piece of amusement or photography or any fares to open to-morrow the owner and the manager will be arrested on the spot," said Chief Hall this morning. "Reveres Police to the BOSTON AMERICAN reporter.

"What are you going to do about the slot machines?" he was asked.

"They are a sort of conundrum, and I shall not say what I shall do until to-morrow morning. I need the night to think it over."

Chief Hall is bound to have the beach as quiet as an empty Sunday school, and he will use every man of his force to keep it so.

3 VISITORS TO CITY'S PULPITS

Three visiting clergymen will occupy Boston pulpits to-morrow, when Rev. Joseph E. Perry, of Allston, will preach in the Ruggles Street Baptist Church at the morning service, and Rev. Charles W. Harvey, of Brookline, will occupy the pulpit of the Church of the New Jerusalem in Bowdoin street. An exchange of pulpits will also be made by Rev. Dr. Rowley, of the First Baptist Church, Commonwealth avenue, and Rev. Dr. Winthrop, of the Park Street Church.

"Whether There Is, or Whether There Is Not Anything New Under the Sun," will be the subject or the discourse by Rev. Robert MacDonald, D. D., of Brooklyn, N. Y., at the evening service in Tremont Temple Baptist Church.

At the morning service to the Warren Avenue Baptist Church, Rev. W. H. Swallow will preach on "God Found to a Purpose Place." "Prosperity and Righteousness" will be dwelt upon by Rev. William W. Foster in the First M. E. Church, Temple street, at the morning service.

There will be no service in the Old South Church to-morrow evening, in accordance with the custom at this church of closing the evenings during July and August.

Rev. W. A. Haggerty, of Harvard, will be the speaker at the men's meeting in the Boston Young Men's Christian Association to-morrow afternoon. Miles Langley, boy soprano, will sing.

FIND BABES IN NIGHT SEARCH

Special to the Boston American.

MANCHESTER, N. H., July 9.—After spending the night in the woods at the head of a big searching party, Mrs. Blanchet, of No. 42 Pearl street, found his two children sleeping peacefully under a big pine tree early this morning.

The little ones went picking blueberries yesterday and were lost. When darkness came and they were still missing Blanchet notified the police, and half a hundred men and boys were called to search the lanterns to look for them.

The search was kept up all night. Sunlight had taken the place of moonlight and the hunters were about to give up becoming discouraged as well as weary, when they heard Blanchet shout in a tone that had but one meaning.

FIND $500,000 IN SECURITIES

Special to the Boston American.

TORONTO, July 9.—Louis G. Menke, of 1359 Fulton street, Brooklyn, and 280 Broadway, New York city, who are guests at the King Edward Hotel, accidentally disarranged the paper in a drawer of the bureau in Room 716 occupied by them, and discovered bonds and stock certificates to the value of $500,000. The certificates, on which these stock certificates were issued are Standard Reduction Co., of New York, the International Copper Company of Arizona and the Chertsol Trading Company of New Jersey.

"KID LEWIS" IS FREED BY JURY

No bill was returned by the Suffolk Grand Jury to-day against Augustine A. Gale, known as "Kid Lewis," a pugilist, who was charged with manslaughter in causing the death of William Goulding in a Beach street saloon. It is said this during a fight over a case of beer Goulding fell and fractured his skull.

The jury report of the Grand Jury returns indictments against Walter H. Lantz, Catherine Lantz and Samuel Rubin for robbery from Wilhelm Hirsch. It is alleged the defendants worked a badger game at their home in the Back Bay.

Mary Kerrigan was indicted for polygamy. She was arrested after having been married a month to Thomas McDermott. It being alleged she had another husband, John McIntyre, of Woburn, living at the time of her marriage to McDermott.

Abraham Lipp, one of the alleged straw bail men, was indicted for subornation of perjury.

Forty-six true bills and thirty-one ab bills were returned.

RIO DE JANEIRO, July 9.—A modus vivendi with regard to the boundary disputes between Brazil and Peru has been arranged.

ABBOTT HELD BY GRAND JURY

Everett Abbott, former treasurer of the American Marine Transportation Company, of this city, was indicted for grand larceny by the Suffolk County Grand Jury this morning. He fled from Boston on March 15 last, and was arrested in San Francisco about two months ago on the charge of misappropriating $5,852 belonging to the company. He had been pursued for 6,000 miles, through Texas, New Mexico, Arizona and Mexico by a surety company detective.

VON BUELOWS HONORED.

BERLIN, July 9.—Emperor William has, it is said, conferred on the Von Buelow family a seat in the Upper House of the Landtag, in recognition of its services to the State. The honor conferred by the Emperor is enjoyed only by fourteen other noble families.

FARLEY WILL LET WOMEN SING.

NEW YORK, July 9.—Women are not to be excluded hereafter from the choirs of Catholic churches under Archbishop Farley's jurisdiction, but all non-Catholics will be. The music will follow the Pope's rules.

BULLS CONTROL WALL STREET

By Boston American Leased Wire.

NEW YORK, July 9.—The bullish sentiment continued in control of the stock market to-day, notwithstanding the general disappointment at the omission of a sound money plank from the Democratic National platform.

The railroad list as a whole made improvements of substantial fractions. Southern Railway preferred developed sudden strength, advancing nearly two points, while the common rose a little less than a point.

In the industrial list there was a renewal of bull speculation in National Lead. A gain of nearly two points was scored. United States Steel preferred, Tennessee Coal and Iron and Amalgamated Copper were decidedly strong.

WIFE SAYS HE IS INNOCENT

ALFRED, Me., July 9.—At the trial of Dr. Charles A. Eastman, on the charge of criminal malpractice, Dr. Eastman's wife testified to his innocence and corroborated his statements in regard to the treatment of the patient.

Miss Emily Dewar, of Somerville, Mass., who assisted in the case of Miss McIntire, testified that Captain McIntire told her he had to say something against the doctor in order to clear himself.

Dr. Frederick Wallace Abbott, of Taunton, Mass., said there was no evidence of systemic infection, and in his opinion she did not die of septicemia, the cause which the three physicians who testified for the State gave as the probable cause of death.

FLEECED OF $78 BY OLD GAME

Mrs. Adelino C. Whitney, of No. 28 Sutherland avenue, Brighton, called at police headquarters to-day and reported that Watts a well-dressed, good-looking and smooth-talking stranger had swindled her out of $78.

In telling her story to Chief Watts, she said that a man drove up to her house, rang the bell and asked to show her samples of silks and satins. While looking over the samples the stranger said a large quantity of goods had been smuggled into this country from France and that he could let Mrs. Whitney have them at a greatly reduced price.

Mrs. Whitney gave the man $78, and he gave her an address on Boylston street where she was to call for the goods. Mrs. Whitney could find no such number

BRYAN'S GREAT SPEECH CREATES WILD SCENE IN CONVENTION

ROOSEVELT DESCRIBED AS THE APOSTLE OF WAR

Former Candidate Pledges Support to the Ticket, and Warns the Country Against the Dangers of Militarism---Necessity of Democratic Victory Now Greater Than Ever.

By Boston American Leased Wire.

ST. LOUIS, July 9.—William J. Bryan made a great speech in the convention in the early hours of the morning, in which he tried to rally all the anti-Parker strength. He asked the Chair to request the delegates to suspend the time limit for seconding speeches, as he had much to say. This was agreed to and Mr. Bryan began amid great applause:

"Gentlemen of the Convention—Two nights without sleep and a cold makes it difficult for me to make myself heard. I trust that it will be easier in a moment, but, as I desire to speak for the delegates rather than to the visitors, I hope that the delegates at least can hear.

"I Have Kept the Faith."

"Eight years ago a Democratic Convention placed in my hands the standard of the party and gave me the commission as its candidate. Four years later that commission was renewed. I come now to this Democratic Convention to return the commission, and to say that you may dispute whether I fought a good fight, you may dispute whether I finished my course, but you cannot deny that I have kept the faith. (Great and prolonged applause.) As your candidate I did all I could to bring success to the party, and as a private citizen to-day I am more interested in Democratic success than I ever was when I was a candidate. (Applause.)

"The reasons that made the election of a Democratic President desirable were strongest in 1900 than in 1896, and the reasons that make Democratic success desirable are stronger in 1904 than they were in 1900. The gentleman who presented New York's candidate dwelt upon the danger of militarism, and he did not overstate the danger.

Black's Eulogy of War.

"Let me quote the most remarkable passage that ever occurred or that was ever found in the speech of nomination of any candidate for President. Ex-Governor Black, of New York, in presenting the name of Theodore Roosevelt to the Republican convention, used these words:

"'The fate of nations is still decided by their wars. You may talk of orderly tribunals and learned refereeing, you may read in the schools the gentle praises of the quiet life; you may strike from your books the last note of every lesson that ate, and out of the smoke and thunder will always be the tramp of horses and the men, ragged, tattered, torn. Then may prophesy and women pray that peace will come, but it will abide forever on this earth only when the fable of childhood are the accepted chants to guide the destinies of men.

"'Only are numerous and mighty, and man can tell which wires run around the world. The nations basking to-day in quiet contentment and repose may still be on the deadly circuit, and to-morrow writhing in the cells of war. This is the time when great figures must be kept in front. If the pressure is great, the material to resist it must be granite and iron.'

"This is a eulogy of war; this is a declaration that the time hoped for, prayed for, of perpetual peace will never come. This is eulogizing the doctrine of brute force and giving denials to hopes and prayers of the Prince of Peace. This candidate for re-election, is presented as the embodiment of that ideal, the granite and the iron to represent the new idea of militarism. Do you and I want to defeat the military idea? There are those who are trying to defeat the military idea. Let me tell you that none on earth, north, east or south, more fears the triumph of that idea than I do.

Lowering National Ideals.

"If this is the doctrine that our nation is to stand for it is retrograding and not progressing. It is lowering of the ideals of the nation; it is turning backward to the age of force. More than that, this is a challenge to the Christian civilization of the world and nothing less. (Applause.)

"Twenty-seven hundred years ago a prophet foretold the coming of One who was to be called the Prince of Peace. Two thousand years ago He came upon the earth, and the song that was sung at his birth was "Peace on Earth, Good Will Toward Men." For 1900 years this doctrine of peace has been growing. It has been taking hold upon the hearts of men. For this doctrine millions have died. Given given their lives for the doctrine of peace thousands have crossed the ocean and given their lives among the savage tribes and among foreign nations.

"This doctrine of peace, the foundation of Christian civilization, has been the glowing hope of the world, and now comes the spectacle of the greatest of nations presenting for the office of President of the greatest republic of all history a man who is a worshiper of force, and who loves not the doctrine of peace, but the doctrine that the destines of nations are still settled by their wars.

Can Defeat Roosevelt.

"Will you of New York present a graver indictment against President Roosevelt than that? Will you of the South present a graver indictment against President Roosevelt than that? I do not ask what is the character of the man. He may have every virtue, he may be exemplary in every way, but if the President shares the idea of the man who nominated him, if the President believes his sponsor at Chicago, that wars must settle the destinies of nations, that peace is but a dream, that women may pray for it, that men may prophecy about it, that all these talks of orderly tribunals are but empty sound, if he believes these things he is a dangerous man for our country and the world (applause), and I believe he ought to be defeated. (Great applause.)

I believe he can be defeated, and if a Democratic party does what it ought to do, I believe he will be defeated. (Great applause.)

How can you defeat him! I tried to defeat the Republican party as your candidate. I failed, you say. Yes, I did. I received a million more votes than any Democrat had ever received before (applause), and yet I failed. Why did I fail? Because there was some who had affiliated with the Democratic party who thought my election dangerous to the country, and they left it and helped to elect my opponent. That is why I failed. (Applause.)

I have no words of criticism for them. (Applause.) I have always believed, and I believe now, and I shall always believe, I hope, that a man's duty to his country is higher than his duty to be party. I hope it will always be true that men of all parties will have the moral courage to have their party when they believe to stay with their party would be to endanger their country. The success of our government depends upon the independence and moral courage of its citizenship. But, my friends, if I failed with six millions and a half to defeat the Republican party, can those who defeated me succeed in defeating the Republican party? (Applause.) If under the leadership of those who were loyal in 1896 we failed shall we succeed under the leadership of those who were not loyal in 1896. (Applause.) If we are going to have some other god besides this war god that is presented to us by Governor Black, what kind of god is it to be? Must we choose between a god of war and a god of woe? Is there no choice between them? (Applause.) If there is anything that compares in hatefulness with militarism it is hypocrisy, and I trust that the Democratic party ought not to be compelled to choose between militarism on the one side and hypocrisy on the other. (Applause.)

To Make a Unanimous Platform.

"We came here and agreed upon a platform. We were in session sixteen hours last night. You can put sixteen hours into a night. We entered the committee room at 8 last evening and left it at 12 to-day. But, my friends, I never saw a committee work in a better purpose in my life (applause), because I helped to bring the party together so that we could present a unanimous platform to our country. (Applause.)

"How did we get it? It was not all that I could have desired; it was not all that the Democrats desire. You had to consider something that they wanted in the platform, but by mutual concession and by mutual surrender we agreed upon a platform and we stand on that platform. (Loud applause.)

Disclaims Being a Dictator.

"But, my friends, we need more than platforms, we have to nominate a ticket, and that is the work of this convention. Do you come to this convention instructed on any man to the extent of a majority? If so I would not ask you to disregard your instructions; I would not if I could prevent it permit you to disregard your instructions. I would not if I could prevent it permit you to disregard your instructions. I believe in the right of the people to rule, I believe in the right of the people to instruct their delegates, and when a delegate is instructed it is binding upon him; but, my friends, not a majority came instructed for any candidate.

"That means that you were left upon your responsibility to select a candidate, and a grave responsibility it is, but it is a responsibility resting on these delegates in this convention. I have not come to ask anything of this convention. Yesterday I asked nothing but to be permitted to fight the battles of Democracy. (Great applause.) Some of you have called me a dictator. If I was false; you know it was false. (Applause.)

"How have I tried to dictate? I have suggested that I thought certain things ought to be done; have not you exercised the same privilege? Was there any one who had a right to, who have? Because I was your candidate am I not expected to ever make a suggestion?

People's Wish Supreme.

"Why, sirs, if that condition went with the nomination for the Presidency, no man worthy to be President would ever accept a nomination.

"The right of a man to have an opinion, to express it, is a more important and more sacred right than the holding of any office, however high.

"I had my opinions about the platform, I made my suggestions; not all of them were received. I would like to have seen the Kansas City platform reaffirmed. (Applause.)

"I am not ashamed of that platform. I believe if those who I believed when running upon it and was a candidate, but the people in the Democratic party did not agree with me, and their vote was supreme when it vetoed my suggestion, I have to accept. There is no court to which I can appeal. I have not attempted to dictate about candidates. I have not asked the Democrats of this nation to nominate any particular man. I have said that there were men in every State who are worthy to be President, and I have said out of the 8,500,000 who voted for me in both campaigns we ought to be able to find at least one good man for President. (Applause.)

"I made these suggestions only in a general way. I am here to-night as a delegate from my own district in Nebraska. I have not confidence enough in my own opinion to tell you that I can pick out the man and say that that man must be nominated or we shall lose. I have, I think, a reasonable faith in my own opinion; at least, I have this faith that I would rather accept my own opinions and stand by them, if I believe them right, than to accept anybody else's, if I believed them wrong. (Applause.)

Platform on Which All Can Stand.

"Nebraska is not here asking for the nomination of any man. We now have a platform on which we all can stand. Now give us a ticket behind which all of us can stand.

"You can go into any State you please and get him. I have not as much faith in anyone here in the world as locality. I have never been a great stickler for the nomination of candidates from Southern States on the theory that personal popularity would elect them. I have had as much faith in the virtues of the Democratic principles that I thought I could get enough to vote for a good man from any other State before he would vote for a good man from his own State. (Applause.)

"I do not believe that with this doctrine of State pride, and I found that when people come with a candidate and tell us first that we must carry a certain State and that man is the only one who would carry the State, they do not put up a bond to deliver the goods if they are accepted. (Applause.) And, anyhow, a State that is so uncertain that only one Democrat in the nation can carry it cannot be relied upon in a great crisis. (Applause.)

Peace Cause of the Poor.

"Now, we have our platform. Select your candidate.

"If it is the choice or the wish of this convention that the standard should be placed in the hands of the gentleman presented by California, the man who, though he has money, pleads the cause of the people; the man who, in all the years that I think I can safely say, among hundreds more of which the candidates proposed, the one who more than any other represented opposition to the trust question, if you want to place that standard in his hands I want to place the standard in his hands Nebraska will be with you and contribute her part. (Cheers.)

"If you prefer an Eastern man and find some one who will give both elements of the Democracy, believing in the necessity to trust in, something to hope for, we are willing to join you with him. My friends, it is not always that every available man is mentioned. There is in the State of Pennsylvania a man whom I mention, without consulting his delegation, without consent of the man himself; an Eastern man; voted with us in both campaigns, stood against us on the money question, and, I believe, in sympathy with the people. A man twice governor of a great States (cheers); a man who, when he was first put up when a candidate, again carried the great State of Pennsylvania, outside of the two great cities of Philadelphia and Pittsburg.

Second Cockrell Nomination.

"If the Eastern Democrats who have insisted that your objection to me was my belief in free silver, if you believe that I am willing to take a gold man, I am willing to say that you prefer a man from the East, in this man, for I will trust his honesty on all questions. (Applause.) But, my friends, I do not, Nebraska does not, demand that, only mention these candidates as illustrations.

"I come here to second the nomination of a man, and I come to second his nomination not because I can assert to you that he is more available than any other person who might be named, but because I love the man and because I believe the platform we have adopted I don't think there is any good reason why every Democrat in the East might not vote for this man.

"I come to second the nomination of Senator Cockrell, of Missouri. (Long-continued applause followed his mention. He is the nestor of the Senate. He is experienced in public affairs. He is known to be a true Democrat. He can be measured by it, and, my friends, I would be willing to guarantee everything he did. (Loud applause.) "They say that he comes from the South. What if he does? I do not share the feeling that every people in the South are disloyal. You cannot take a candidate from the South. They say he was in the Confederate army. What if he was? I don't share the belief of those who believe that the issues growing upon it and was a candidate, but the ex-Confederate. (Prolonged cheering and applause).

WAR ISSUES SETTLED.

My friends, that war, that cruel war, was forty years ago. Its issues are settled; its wounds are healed. The participants are fleeing. We have got another war on, and those who know what the war between plutocracy and democracy means will not ask where a man stood forty years ago. They will ask where does he stand to-day in this war. My friends, I think the greatest issue in this country to-day is plutocracy vs. democracy. You have said that one, but then it was the tariff idea. There is an issue greater than the silver issue, the tariff issue, the trust issue. It is the issue between democracy and plutocracy, whether this is to be a Government of the people, administered in behalf of the people. It is either this or it is to be a rule of the moneyed element of the country for their own interest alone.

"The issue has been growing. I want you, Democrats here assembled, to help us meet this question. You tell me the Republican candidate stands for militarism. Yes, but he also stands for plutocracy. You tell me he delights in war. But there is another objection to him and that is that he does not enforce the law against a big criminal as he does against a little criminal. The laws are being violated to-day, and those laws must be enforced. The people must understand that we are to have equal rights for all and special privileges to none. (Applause.) We have had the debauchment of elections. It was stated the other day that in the little State of Delaware $250,000 was spent in the State in one day just before the election in 1896.

Not by Purchase; by Principle.

"Some say that we must have a great campaign fund and go out and bid against the Republicans. My friends, I want to warn you that if the Democratic party is to save this nation it must not save it by purchase, but by principle. (Applause.) Every time we resort to purchase we cultivate the spirit of barter, and the price will be the highest bidder.

Every time we resort to purchase we cultivate the spirit of barter, and the price will be the highest bidder.

"If the Democratic party is to save this country, it must appeal to the conscience of the country. It must point out the dangers to the Republicans, and if the party will nominate a man, I care not from what part he comes, who is not the candidate of a faction, who is not the candidate of an element, but the candidate of a party, the party will drive the Republican party from power and save this country. (Applause.)

"My friends, I believe that you could take a man from any Southern State who would go out and make a fight that would appeal to Democrats. All the Democrats who love democratic principles and to Republicans who begin to care for their nation's welfare—take such a man and I believe that he would get a million more votes than the candidate of any faction whose selection would be regarded as a triumph of a part of the party over the rest of the party. (Applause.)

"I simply submit it for your consideration. I am here to discharge a duty that I owed to the party; I knew before I came to this convention that a majority of the delegates would not agree with me in my financial view. I knew that there would be among the delegates many who did not vote for me before. I sorely needed their help.

"I was not objecting to the majority against me, nor to the presence of those who went away and came back. But, my friends, I came, not because I thought I would be delighted to be in the minority in my opinion, but because I owed a duty to the 6,000,000 brave, loyal men who made a sacrifice for me. (Cheers.)

Great Ovation to Bryan.

"I came to get them as good a platform as I could. I have helped them to get a good platform. (Applause.) I came to help to get as good a candidate as I can, and I hope that he would be one who can draw the factions together, who can give to us, who believe in aggressive, positive Democratic reform, something to hope for, and to those who believe different from me the main question that he cannot give them something to hope for, too.

"I close with an appeal that I make from the heart to the hearts of those who hear me. Give us a plot who will guide the Democratic ship from militarism, the Scylla of militarism, without wrecking her on the Charybdis of Plutocracy. (Cheers.)

Mr. Bryan's address occupied forty-seven minutes and the finish came in a well-tested physical strength was far gone. He left the stand amid a scene of enthusiasm delegates who pressed his hands, clapped him on the back and cheered him at every step. Even after he reached his seat the crowd jammed the aisle near him, cheering repeatedly, and refused to move, even for the sergeant-at-arms.

After the demonstration had remained in full force for several minutes, delegate James Kerr, of Pennsylvania, demanded the regular order. The chair was rapping for order and the DELEGATES were shouting to the delegates to be seated.

The galleries seized the opportunity to stand up and the small flags were again waved. Then the big banners and the sticks was again resorted to and the din was renewed until the clerk called in vain for WYoming until the great audience was exhausted.

SWITCH DID PARKER GOOD, SAYS MOTHER

By Boston American Leased Wire.

ST. LOUIS, July 8.—Mrs. Harriet Stratton Parker, mother of Judge Alton B. Parker, who lives in this city with her daughter, has all along been confident of her son's nomination and hopeful of his election.

Mrs. Parker is eighty years old, but she looks and acts younger. She said to-day that Judge Parker had never confided to her whether he desired the Presidency, and that she knew absolutely nothing of his plans beyond what she reads in the newspapers.

Mrs. Parker attributes much of her son's success to the fact that she disciplined him with a liberal application of the switch in his early years. She says that children of the present day have not as good manners as the youth of half a century ago, a condition she ascribes to the general abandonment of corporeal punishment.

MASS. DELEGATION ANGRY AT HAMLIN

ST. LOUIS, July 9.—There is a good deal of indignation, which is not suppressed in the Massachusetts delegation, because the minority of the committee on resolutions, after being voted down on the proposition to have the platform formally recognize the question of the standard of value as settled, did not insist upon placing their views before the convention.

Some members of the delegation felt that possibly the convention which would involve no surrender of principle, but which might take the sting out of the contemplated victory over the Republics, might be made by waiving a flat declaration of the gold standard; but all were agreed that the least which could be done would be to adopt a plank recognizing in terms the settlement of the financial question by the trend of events as a finality.

This opinion was expressed very strongly by Charles S. Hamlin on the train, and Mr. Hamlin was selected as the Massachusetts member of the resolutions committee because it was believed he would vigorously insist upon this.

Mr. Hamlin followed his convictions through the committee up to the final vote, voting with the minority in favor of a plank recognizing the standard of value as settled.

But when it became apparent that the committee could not reach an amicable agreement upon a money plank, Mr. Hamlin accepted the situation and acquiesced in the final determination to ignore this subject altogether. Several members of the delegation, including Colonel Gaston, think that Mr. Hamlin, even though he were the only member of the entire Committee on Resolutions to do so, should have presented a minority report to the convention.

"TOM" TAGGART TO MANAGE CAMPAIGN

By Boston American Leased Wire.

ST. LOUIS, July 9.—Thomas T. Taggart, of Indiana, is being played as favorite for the chairmanship of the National Committee by the Parker managers to-night. As August Belmont is, however, laboring hard with every member of the committee to place him (Belmont) in the management of the campaign.

William F. Sheehan, Judge Parker's personal choice, has been offered the seat. It is now not probable that a selection will be reached until after the special meeting of the new national committee, which is likely to be called for within the next ten days, though it is barely possible that the Taggart people will insist upon a choice at the meeting to-morrow.

Taggart claims the support of Hill, Sheehan and McCarren, and has loomed up strongly since Hill and Belmont quarreled over the elimination of the gold plank from the St. Louis platform. He is the national committeeman from his State, and delivered his delegates to Hill months ago.

Belmont has been offered the secretaryship, but he has refused to withdraw his contest for the chairmanship. Mr. Sheehan said to-night:

"I am out of the field for any commanding position in the campaign."

Senator McCarren said:

"Nothing is settled about the national chairmanship. No re-election will be made for ten days or a fortnight probably."

MASS. CHEERS NAME OF OLNEY

By Boston American Leased Wire.

CONVENTION HALL, ST. LOUIS, July 9.—It was 2:20 this morning when Senator A. A. Collins was called to the platform to present the choice of the majority of Massachusetts for the presidential nomination.

For six hours the men of the Bay State had sat in the awful heat of the packed Convention Hall and listened to the speeches which named the candidates of other States. They had nothing to do but listen to the long arguments, fan themselves and await their turn.

When it came, when Mayor Collins's name was called, they arose as one. Each delegate was provided with a flag. They waved these vigorously. John Howard and William McNary let loose balls of colored paper string that floated in tangled masses over the heads of other delegations.

CHEERS FOR COLLINS.

Mayor Collins was heartily greeted by the big audience. He acknowledged it amidst the more vociferous applause from the Massachusetts men. He spoke slowly but clearly, and his voice reached even the remote tables, which are supposed to hear nothing.

"My speech will be short; Mr. Olney needs no introduction," the Mayor said, and he kept his word. He spoke exactly six minutes, counting the interpolations of "Hit it, hit," from Massachusetts when Olney's name was mentioned.

At the conclusion of his address the Mayor was given a round of applause.

Gaston Keeps His Coat On.

John O'Brien led the delegation in cheering. All Massachusetts was up for Olney.

Colonel Gaston did not take off his coat. Instead he made several journeys to the roof of the early morning outside. John Burnett likewise wore his coat, but removed his gloves.

John O'Gara resumed his place in the delegation when it was decided by George Fred Williams that the quit rule should not be fought from the floor.

All the Hearst men occupied their seats, but took no part in the demonstration.

LAWN PARTY FOR HOSPITAL.

The annual lawn party for the benefit of the Holy Ghost Hospital will be Saturday, July 16, at the hospital grounds on Cambridge street, Cambridge. There will be a table in charge of the Elks and another in charge of the Missourian Club. A merry-go-round will be in operation, and a band will furnish music for dancing.

COLLINS PAYS "OLD IRELAND" VISIT AT FAIR

Gaston Declines to Go, as He Stays to Work for the Olney Boom.

COLLINS GUYS A POLICEMAN

By Boston American Leased Wire.

HEADQUARTERS MASSACHUSETTS DELEGATION, St. Louis, July 9.—Mayor Collins forgot the Olney boom yesterday afternoon. He forgot while he visited Ireland.

Dr. Frand G. Donohue, who is surgeon-in-chief to the Massachusetts delegation and honorary medical officer of the Democratic convention, did escort duty. Ireland is in the exposition in that entrancing quarter known as the Pike. It was the Mayor's first visit to the Pike or to Ireland.

"I really must go there, you know," he said before starting on the trip. "I owe something to the Irish race, and something to do with it. Old you see I can't go away without seeing old Ireland. That's not a bad place, Ireland."

The word passed around that the Mayor was going to visit the Pike and Ireland caused a stir among the delegates.

Gaston Not to Be Tempted.

"It will be our last chance," said Congressman McNary to Colonel Gaston. "Let's put the Olney boom and the missionary work in our pockets for the afternoon and go along with the crowd."

"Never," said Colonel Gaston firmly. "I shall stay here and continue the missionary work. I have discovered a man in Vermont who may be induced to break away from Parker after the first ballot and come to us. I have distinctly told him there is nothing in it."

"You're right, Colonel," said the Congressman sadly. "There is nothing."

"For him, I mean," corrected the only candidate for Governor of Massachusetts, hastily.

The word, passed along, gained other adherents of the idea that Ireland and "The Pike" for Friday afternoon were the real things.

Frank Rock, of Marlboro, organized a party, composed of the Mayor, Harry Nawn, John Garland, William Power and Tom Ryan and Chris Eriksen.

McNary found James Vahey to be agreeable to the excursion, and they started out together. Most of the others had disappeared for the afternoon. Kwen John S. Thayer was not to be found.

The Mayor and Dr. Donohue were early to avoid the crowds. They were strolling at the entrance a police officer, who wore a beautiful suit of green, caught the Mayor looked at him closely. "There are some just like you in books on the days in Ireland only they don't wear the green but the blue."

In Ireland the Mayor saw everything there was to be seen, kissed the Blarney stone, a model of the kind occupied by ancestors of President McKinley. "Very fine," was the Mayor's comment.

When they came out it was raining.

The Mayor and Dr. Donohue did a lively sprint back to the car that carried them to the hotel.

Mayor Writes Speech.

There for the first time the Mayor went to work on a nomination speech. The speech that told the convention that Richard Olney, of Massachusetts, was a man worthy of their votes, and that they should join in the leadership of Massachusetts and be with the Bay State delegation. In order to write out the speech, the Mayor asked him self up in his room, secured a pad of paper and with handkerchief tied around his neck went to work.

And while the Mayor was busy with his speech his fellow-members of the delegation were busy with affairs on the "Pike." All went to Ireland first. After that they scattered, taking in the things that appealed to each.

"WHO'S PARKER?" ASKS ARCHIE ROOSEVELT

OYSTER BAY, July 9.—"Who's Parker?" That was the question Archie Roosevelt asked when he rode to the village post office to-day on Algonquin, his Shetland pony, and was told that Judge Parker was nominated.

"Oh, I know," he continued with a smile. "He's the man that's going to run against papa."

After breakfast to-day the President eagerly read all the morning newspapers on the doings at the convention, and enjoyed a game of tennis with Teddy, Jr., and his cousin, Robert Roosevelt.

POLICE GUARD CLUB CROWD FROM DOORS

ST. LOUIS, July 9.—Shortly after Mr. Littleton began his speech in the convention hall ten policemen, guarding the Thirteenth street entrance, had a lively experience with a large concourse of people, who attempted to force themselves into the hall. It was necessary to club several leaders of the crowd, and after ten minutes' hard work the throng was forced back into the street. It looked as if the police would be overpowered.

SUMMER SEATING

Look at the steaming thermometer, and then look at your hot, stuffy, upholstered chairs and sofas.

It isn't a question of extra expense when you buy willow or rattan summer furniture; it is a matter of economy, pure and simple. You save the wear on your expensive winter coverings. You save the dust, dirt and fading of the four worst months of the year.

You have the enjoyment of delightfully cool and refreshing seats during the hot summer, and in the fall you bring out your winter furniture as fresh as before.

And meantime, your summer furniture is good for twenty-five years to come. You will enjoy the change and the novelty of its comfortable lines and proportions.

Incidentally our prices in this department are the lowest of any furniture house in town.

PARKER NAMED ON FIRST BALLOT AFTER GREAT STRUGGLE

BRYAN'S TRIBUTE TO WILLIAM RANDOLPH HEARST

If it is the choice or wish of this convention that the standard shall be placed in the hands of the gentleman presented by California, the man who, though he has money, pleads the cause of the poor; the man who is best beloved, I can safely say, among laboring men, of all the candidates proposed; the one man who, more than any other, represents peace; if you want to place the standard in his hands and make Hearst the candidate of this convention, Nebraska will be with you in the fight.—W. J. BRYAN'S SPEECH TO THE DEMOCRATIC CONVENTION.

besides those named above, are James R. Williams, of Illinois; Senator Culberson, of Texas; former Senator George Turner, of Washington; Judson Harmon, of Ohio; David R. Francis, of Missouri; Governor Dockery, of Missouri, and J. W. Kern, of Indiana.

Turner is looked upon as the man most acceptable to Parker as a running mate, but the positive opposition aroused by Alabama appears to have injured his chancese.

FRANCIS BEING BOOMED.

Ex-Governor Francis is being boomed by the St. Louis crowd, which appears to want Francis to have everything in sight, but the boom is growing too slowly. It must develop within the few hours or burst. Folk, whose boom started with a rush, has positively and emphatically stated that he will not permit the use of his name.

Ohio is saying nothing, and the recent moves of the Ohioans, their sudden switch to Parker and dropping of Judson Harmon, are taken to indicate that Harmon may be sprung for the vice-presidency.

Early to-day John R. McLean's name began to be heard around the hotel corridors, and his fitness for the place was discussed.

BRYAN'S GREAT FIGHT TO DEFEAT PARKER

By Boston American Leased Wire.

CONVENTION HALL, ST. LOUIS, July 10.—Judge Alton Brooks Parker, of New York, was nominated for President on the first ballot of the Democratic National Convention at 6:40 o'clock, Boston time, having been in continuous session since 8 o'clock last night.

When the roll-call was ended, and before the vote was announced, Judge Parker lacked nine votes of the 667 necessary to a choice. Idaho changed six votes to Parker, Nevada following with two more. West Virginia next gave Parker thirteen votes, and Washington ten, making a two-thirds majority of the convention.

The following was the detailed vote on the first ballot, before the changes were made:

Alabama, Parker 22; Arkansas, Parker 18; California, Hearst, 20; Colorado, Parker 4, Hearst 5, McClellan 1; Connecticut, Parker 14; Delaware, Gray 6; Illinois, Hearst 54; Indiana, Parker 30; Iowa, Hearst 26; Kansas, Hearst 10, Parker 7, Miles 2, Cockrell 1; Kentucky, Parker 26; Louisiana, Parker 18; Maine, Parker 7, Hearst 1, Olney 4; Michigan, Parker 28; Minnesota, Parker 9, Hearst 9, Cockrell 1, Towne 2, Gray 1; Mississippi, Parker 20; Missouri, Cockrell 36; Montana, Parker 6; Nebraska, Cockrell 4, Hearst 4, Olney 1, Gray 1, Wall 1, Parker 1, Pattison 1, Miles 1; Nevada, Hearst 6; New Hampshire, Parker 8; New Jersey, Parker 24; New York, Parker 78; North Carolina, Parker 24; North Dakota, Williams 8; Ohio, Parker 46; Oregon, Parker 4, Hearst 2, McClellan 1, Coler 1; Pennsylvania, Parker 66; Rhode Island, Hearst 8, Parker 2; South Carolina, Parker 18; South Dakota, Hearst 8; Tennessee, Parker 24; Texas, 2, Parker 36; Utah, Parker 6; Vermont, Parker 8; Virginia, Parker 24; West Virginia, Parker 13, Hearst 2, Gorman 2; Washington, Hearst 10; Wisconsin, Wall 26; Wyoming, Hearst 6; Alaska, Parker 6; Arizona, Hearst 6; District of Columbia, Parker 6; Indian Territory, Parker 5, Hearst 1; Hawaii, Hearst 6; New Mexico, Hearst 6; Oklahoma, Parker 2, Texas, 2, McClellan 1, Olney 1; Porto Rico, Parker 2, Hearst 4.

Of Olney's votes, 32 were cast by Massachusetts, four by Maine, one by Oklahoma and one by Nebraska.

David B. Hill was in tears when he realized that his candidate had won.

Nomination Made Unanimous.

Before the vote could be announced Governor Dockery, of Missouri, withdrew the name of Senator Cockrell, and moved that the nomination of Judge Parker be made unanimous, and Mayor Collins seconded it. The motion was carried with a yell, and the usual demonstration started. The delegates and spectators were too near collapse after their night-long session, however, and the noise ended in a howl of affirmation when a motion to take a recess to 8 o'clock was made and carried. At that hour the nominations for a candidate for Vice-President will be made.

The long session was the result of one of the most remarkable fights ever waged in a national convention. It was a fight by William Jennings Bryan, of Nebraska, in a struggle to hold the anti-Parkerites firm and prevent the nomination of the New York jurist. Bryan worked hard all night, rallying the followers of favorite sons, and urging each leader to hold his men in line and prevent a Parker victory.

BRYAN TAKES PLATFORM.

The anti-Parker people hammered at Hill and Belmont at every opportunity. Bryan himself took the platform when daylight came, and by unanimous consent the time limit on seconding speeches was removed.

In a great speech that aroused the convention to wild enthusiasm the Nebraskan seconded the nomination of every candidate with the exception of Parker, mentioning each by name, and adding to the list Ex-Governor Robert E. Pattison of Pennsylvania. He paid a glowing tribute to Congressman Hearst. To the New York delegation he said:

"Nebraska asks nothing. All we want is a man we can get behind and work for—and trust. Eight years ago the Democratic party placed our banner in my hands. Four years later my commission was renewed. I return the standard and take my place in the party ranks.

"You may charge that my leadership was faulty; that I failed, but I defy you to say that I have been untrue to the trust or false to the Democratic faith.

DANGER OF MILITARISM.

"Do not compel Democracy to choose between militarism and plutocracy; do not force us either to acknowledge the god of war or bow down to the god of gold. Give us a man of and for the people."

Bryan's speech threw the convention into a uproar, but the plans of the Hill-Belmont combine were too well laid to be shaken, and as the confusion subsided the roll call began. The Parker politicians stood firm. They lacked the two-thirds they claimed, but by so small a margin that the early changes gave Parker the nomination.

The session which ended with the nomination of Parker was one of the most remarkable in the history of national conventions. The battle lasted ten long hours, during which the leaders fought with all the strength and ingenuity of long years of political experience. Twelve thousand excited men and women filled the galleries, cheering their favorites or jeering the opposing forces.

WITH GRIM ENERGY.

The spectators never left their seats during the night, sending out for luncheons of coffee and sandwiches, that they might not miss one feature of the remarkable session. They cheered, yelled and shouted for half an hour at a time, stamping until the building trembled, and waving flags and banners until the Coliseum resembled a forest of fluttering stars and stripes.

The Parker leaders realized that Parker must be nominated on the first or second ballot or he was beaten. Hill, Sheehan and Belmont set grimly to work to bring about the nomination. With wonderful energy they kept together the forces organized throughout the campaign which preceded the convention.

A FINAL CONFERENCE.

Although battling against odds, the opposition, made up of half a dozen candidates, fought like Spartans over every inch of the ground. At a final conference of the opposition leaders yesterday morning it was determined to wear out the Parker forces during the ninth session and force an adjournment until to-day. Every hour gained by them was helpful. Delay could not, as conditions were, help the Parker people. It would be likely to injure them.

Parker's managers were not long in discovering the antis' plan of campaign.

"We will make a nomination to-day," said Sheehan grimly, when asked early in the evening as to the intention of the Parker men, "if it takes until 4 o'clock in the morning. We are going to fight it out."

It took until 4 o'clock and then some more. And it was fought out.

A REMARKABLE SCENE.

Everything that had been done before in convention affairs was preliminary to this trial of strength. Interest on the part of the public, which had been strong heretofore, was keyed to the highest pitch by the prospect of a battle. The fact that the nominations were about to be made, and at a night session, when St. Louis people were not restrained by their business, caused an immense crowd to gather in and about Convention Hall. They swarmed about the building an hour before the opening of the session.

Those fortunate ones who held tickets marched inside to get good seats. Other thousands, kept at a distance by lines of police officers, seemed to get some sort of satisfaction by simply standing about and looking at the building.

Twelve thousand people were jammed in the great auditorium when at 8 o'clock Champ Clark, permanent chairman, rapped for order.

The audience made a spectacle worth going far to see. More than a third of the spectators were women, and their costumes of many hues gave a brilliant coloring to the scene.

NOMINATING A PRESIDENT.

The decks were cleared for action at 10 o'clock last night and the work of making a candidate was begun. It was a long, but, strenuous task. The roll call of States, begun then, lasted until 5 o'clock this morning.

Alabama yielded to New York, and Martin W. Littleton placed in nomination Judge Alton B. Parker, of New York. The conclusion of his speech was the signal for an outburst of enthusiasm. The demonstration lasted twenty-five minutes.

It was evident, however, by the uproar which followed the nominating speech of D. D. Delmas, of California, for William Randolph Hearst, of New York, The enthusiasm was unprecedented. California, Illinois, Rhode Island, Iowa, Wyoming, South Dakota, Hawaii, Kansas, Minnesota and Arizona broke into tumults of cheers. Pictures of Hearst were displayed in all parts of the hall.

MASSING THE STANDARDS.

State standards were waved aloft and borne in procession around the hall. Again and again the delegates, led by California, circled the hall, while the band played "America" and "Dixie." The great throng in the galleries joined in the demonstration. The procession continued to march around the hall for half an hour while the galleries cheered and shouted.

Delmas mentioned the name of Hearst in concluding his speech, at 11:20 o'clock. Thirty-eight minutes elapsed before the Chairman made his gavel heard and the roll call of states was resumed. It was a record-breaking convention demonstration.

When the convention finally got down to roll call again, nearly every State responded with a speaker, either in favor of some favorite son or seconding the nomination of Hearst or Parker.

It was 2:10 o'clock this morning when Massachusetts was reached, Mayor Patrick A. Collins, of Boston, presented the name of Richard Olney as Massachusetts's candidate for President. He was cheered. At 2:30 o'clock Nebraska was reached and Bryan received an ovation when he responded. He was forced to take the platform and stand on a chair. The demonstration lasted five minutes and at the end Mr. Bryan announced that Nebraska yielded to Wisconsin and would take Wisconsin's turn to be heard.

Mayor Rose, of Milwaukee, nominated E. C. Wall, of Wisconsin. In his speech he declared that the men behind Parker were the very ones who helped to scuttle the ship of Democracy in 1896. Arkansas interrupted the speaker to say that his speech was an arraignment of the party and not in the interests of any candidate. There was considerable excitement.

BRYAN SECONDS COCKRELL.

At 4 o'clock Wisconsin was called and yielded to Bryan, who took the platform amid great applause. Mr. Bryan seconded the nomination of Senator Cockrell. He paid a splendid tribute to Mr. Hearst and to Robert E. Pattison of Pennsylvania.

Mr. Bryan finished speaking at 4:45 o'clock, and was given another ovation as he made his way to his seat. The whole assemblage had remained through the night to hear the fight for the Nebraskan.

At 4:46 o'clock, ex-Senator Cannon, of Utah, seconded the nomination of Judge Parker. This concluded the nominating speeches, and the balloting was begun.

NOMINATION OF HEARST.

Throughout the earlier part of the night, from the beginning of the roll-call, there was continuous excitement. After Littleton's speech Arkansas yielded to Tennessee, and Senator Carmack seconded the nomination of Parker. There was some more disturbance, and California came next. Mr. Delmas responding to make the speech for Hearst. Mr. Delmas spoke calmly, with clear enunciation. He is a finished speaker, and possesses gr at personal magnetism.

Colorado, through Thomas J. O'Donnell, seconded the nomination of Parker. Homer S. Cummings, of Connecticut, seconded Parker's nomination. Florida and Georgia seconded Parker, and when Illinois was called Clarence S. Darrow, the noted Chicago lawyer, made a brilliant speech seconding the nomination of Congressman Hearst.

MILES AND GRAY NAMED.

"The Democracy of Jefferson, the Democracy of Bryan," was one of the phrases of Mr. Darrow which evoked applause from the crowd. The crowd was weary, but it was enlivened by the Chicagoan's speech, and it was frequently cheered.

Sterling Handy, of Delaware, nominated Judge George Gray. It is the first time Delaware has offered the name of a candidate since Bayard's name was presented to Grover Cleveland. Nelson A. Miles was placed in nomination by David Overmeyer, of Kansas.

There was a row in the Iowa delegation when Iowa was called. Delegate Samuel S. Wright, of Tipton, insisted on seconding the nomination of Parker and rejected all the other members of his delegation. Chairman Sweet demanded recognition, saying his colleagues on the Iowa delegation wished to remove Wright as honorary vice president. The chair finally recognized Delegate Sinclair, who seconded the nomination of Hearst.

RESTAURANTS MOBBED BY DELEGATES

Famished and Red-Eyed, Crowd Rushes From Convention for Meal and Sleep.

FOOD WAS AT A PREMIUM

By Boston American Leased Wire.

ST. LOUIS, July 9.—If you can imagine about 5,000 men, half dropping for lack of sleep, sitting in stores or cafes and restaurants, demanding food that came not, then you will have a faint idea of the conditions that existed here immediately after the convention adjourned at 6 o'clock this morning.

The restaurant men were caught wholly unprepared. St. Louis does not get into action until about 8 o'clock at best. Therefore when the great gathering broke up, and the famished, red-eyed men who had been sweltering all night overwhelmed the restaurants, the nothing doing sign was hung out.

Governors, Senators, Congressmen and plain citizens clamored for coffee, and when they did not get it, they hit tables, clattered dishes to attract attention and offered fabulous tips to frantic waiters.

There was no one for Parker or for any one else in the crowds. Not a cheer was heard. Food and then plenty of sleep was what the delegates and spectators wanted more than triumph or defeat.

Utterly worn out by the day and night session, the men who tramped solemnly into the Jeffersons, the Planters, the Southern and other hotels merely spoke to one another.

Then they had snatched a little food they went to bed.

Most of them had been astir for at least twenty hours, and many of them for twenty-four hours amid almost constant turmoil and excitement, and complete apathy overcame them.

JUDGE PARKER GOES EARLY TO HIS BED

ESOPUS, N. Y., July 9.—Judge Parker retired little later than his usual hour, apparently the least concerned of all the Democrats in the country as to the outcome of the convention.

The ring of the telephone bell in his house has been the only sign of his interest in the convention. The bulletins were somewhat too frequent, and the Judge kept even closer to the house, his only absence after the morning's work being early in the evening, when he took a short horseback ride.

LEADING PLANKS IN THE DEMOCRATIC PLATFORM

ST. LOUIS, July 9.—The leading planks of the Democratic platform, adopted without debate by the convention, are on capital and labor, Federal Government contract with trusts, imperialism, the tariff, trusts and unlawful combinations and reciprocity with Canada.

Minor planks deal with economy of administration, executive usurpation, the Panama canal, election of United States Senators by the people, the merchant marine, polygamy, the Monroe doctrine, civil service and sectional and race questions.

The planks are as follows:

LABOR AND CAPITAL. "We favor the enactment and administration of laws giving labor and capital impartially their just rights. Capital and labor ought not to be enemies. Each is necessary to the other. Each has its rights, but the rights of labor are certainly no less 'vested,' no less 'sacred' and no less 'unalienable' than the rights of capital."

THE TRUSTS. "We condemn the action of the Republican party in Congress in refusing to prohibit an executive department from entering into contracts with convicted trusts or unlawful combinations in restraint of interstate trade.

"We recognize that the gigantic trusts and combinations designed to enable capital to secure more than its just share of the joint products of capital and labor, and which have been fostered and promoted under Republican rule, are a menace to beneficial competition and an obstacle to permanent business prosperity. A private monopoly is indefensible and intolerable.

"We especially denounce rebates and discrimination by transportation companies as the most potent agencies in promoting and strengthening these unlawful conspiracies against trade.

"Any trust or unlawful combination engaged in interstate commerce which is monopolising any branch of business or production should not be permitted to transact business outside of the State of its origin. Whenever it shall be established in any court of competent jurisdiction that such monopolisation exists, such prohibition should be enforced through comprehensive laws to be enacted on the subject."

THE TARIFF. "The Democratic party has been and will continue to be the consistent opponent of that class of tariff legislation by which certain interests have been permitted, through congressional favor, to draw a heavy tribute from the American people.

"We denounce protection as a robbery of the many to enrich the few, and we favor a tariff limited to the needs of the Government, economically administered and so levied as not to discriminate against any industry, class or section, to the end that the burdens of taxation shall be distributed as equally as possible.

"We favor a revision and a gradual reduction of the tariff by the friends of the masses for the common weal and not by the friends of its abuses, its extortions and its discriminations, keeping in view the ultimate ends of 'equality of burdens and equality of opportunities' and the constitutional purpose of raising a revenue by taxation, to wit, the support of the federal Government in all its integrity and virility, but in simplicity."

RECIPROCITY. "We favor liberal trade arrangements with Canada, and with peoples of other countries where these can be entered into with benefit to American agriculture, manufactures, mining or commerce."

POLYGAMY. "We demand the extermination of polygamy within the jurisdiction of the United States, and the complete separation of Church and State in political affairs."

MERCHANT MARINE. "We denounce the ship subsidy recently passed by the United States Senate as an iniquitous appropriation of public funds for private purposes and a wasteful, illogical and useless attempt to overcome by subsidy the obstructions raised by the Republican legislation to the growth and development of American commerce on the sea.

"We favor the upbuilding of a merchant marine without new or additional burdens upon the people and without bounties from the public treasury."

PARKER GOT NEWS AFTER EARLY SWIM

river. He greeted the group with a cheery "good morning" and then went on down to the river, directly in front of the house.

Forty-five minutes later the first vote came. It read that Judge Parker had received 658 votes on the first ballot. Hardly had it arrived than there was a bulletin that Judge Parker had been unanimously chosen as the nominee. This was exactly at 6:48 o'clock, and almost immediately the word was carried to Judge Parker. When the details came over the wire the dispatch was shown the candidate, and he displayed much interest in it.

Received the Reporters.

Silence and quiet are not alone characteristic of the judge, but also of his home, and, in fact, the entire town of Esopus.

The judge hurried to his room and in an hour appeared as usual. Dressed in a cutaway, white vest and striped trousers, wearing the same pleasing smile that has graced him since the Parker boom was launched. He opened his mail and after glancing over the morning papers invited the reporters, who had become part and parcel of the Parker villa, to breakfast. They had all been on his balcony since early last night and the judge expressed sympathy to them. He sat and chatted freely, but not a word of politics.

There will be little change in the regular routine of the candidate's daily life until after the notification committee meets him. The town of Esopus rejoiced with the announcement, and preparations for a regular good old country rally are well under way.

After breakfasting Judge Parker sat on his piazza and read all the accounts in the morning papers on the convention proceedings. These he supplemented with the bulletins read during the night, after which he read a number of letters.

Went for Horseback Ride.

At 9:30 o'clock he went for an hour's exercise on horseback. At the entrance to Rosemont, Judge Parker was met by a bright-eyed little girl carrying a huge bunch of pink roses, which she presented to him. He sent them to Mrs. Parker by Mr. Neary, a brother-in-law of William F. Sheehan.

Photographers arrived in Esopus with the earliest trains, and were busy all day taking pictures of every interesting object on the Parker farm and of the Parker family. The judge was photographed a dozen times before he had left Rosemont for his horseback ride.

On his return at 10:30 o'clock he found an immense pile of telegrams which had been sent over from the village telephone office. Most of them were entirely congratulatory.

GEN. MILES, THE "SON OF MASSACHUSETTS"

ST. LOUIS, July 9.—David Overmeyer, of Kansas, in presenting the name of General Nelson A. Miles to the convention, introduced him as "a son of Massachusetts." He said: "The man who fills in full measure the requirements of the hour is General Nelson A. Miles. If nominated, he will be the candidate of no faction, but of the whole Democratic party and all patriots; he will receive the votes of every Democrat in the United States. He will receive the independent vote, the anti-imperialist peace vote and the good citizen vote.

"The one man whom the White House fears is Miles. They fear him because the envious shaft aimed at his heart by the treacherous Prescott fell short of its goal, and they fear its rebound, if he is nominated.

"Any honest Democrat can carry the South. Miles can carry not only New York and New Jersey, but Massachusetts, Rhode Island, Connecticut and New Hampshire; he can carry Indiana, Illinois and Wisconsin; he can carry the Pacific States and the Mountain States; he can carry Nebraska, and he can carry Kansas."

THE CLOCK WINDER GOT INTO THE ROOMS

ST. LOUIS, July 9.—There was a great crowd about the room of the committee on resolutions seeking admission. One of these who came was a mild-mannered, studious-looking man. He started to enter the committee room without asking the doorkeeper's leave. The doorkeeper stopped him.

"You can't go in now, sir," he said. "The committee is in executive session."

"But I've got to go in," said the mild-mannered man.

"If you tell me your business I'll speak to the chairman about it," suggested the doorkeeper.

"I've come to wind the clock," answered the mild-mannered man. He got in.

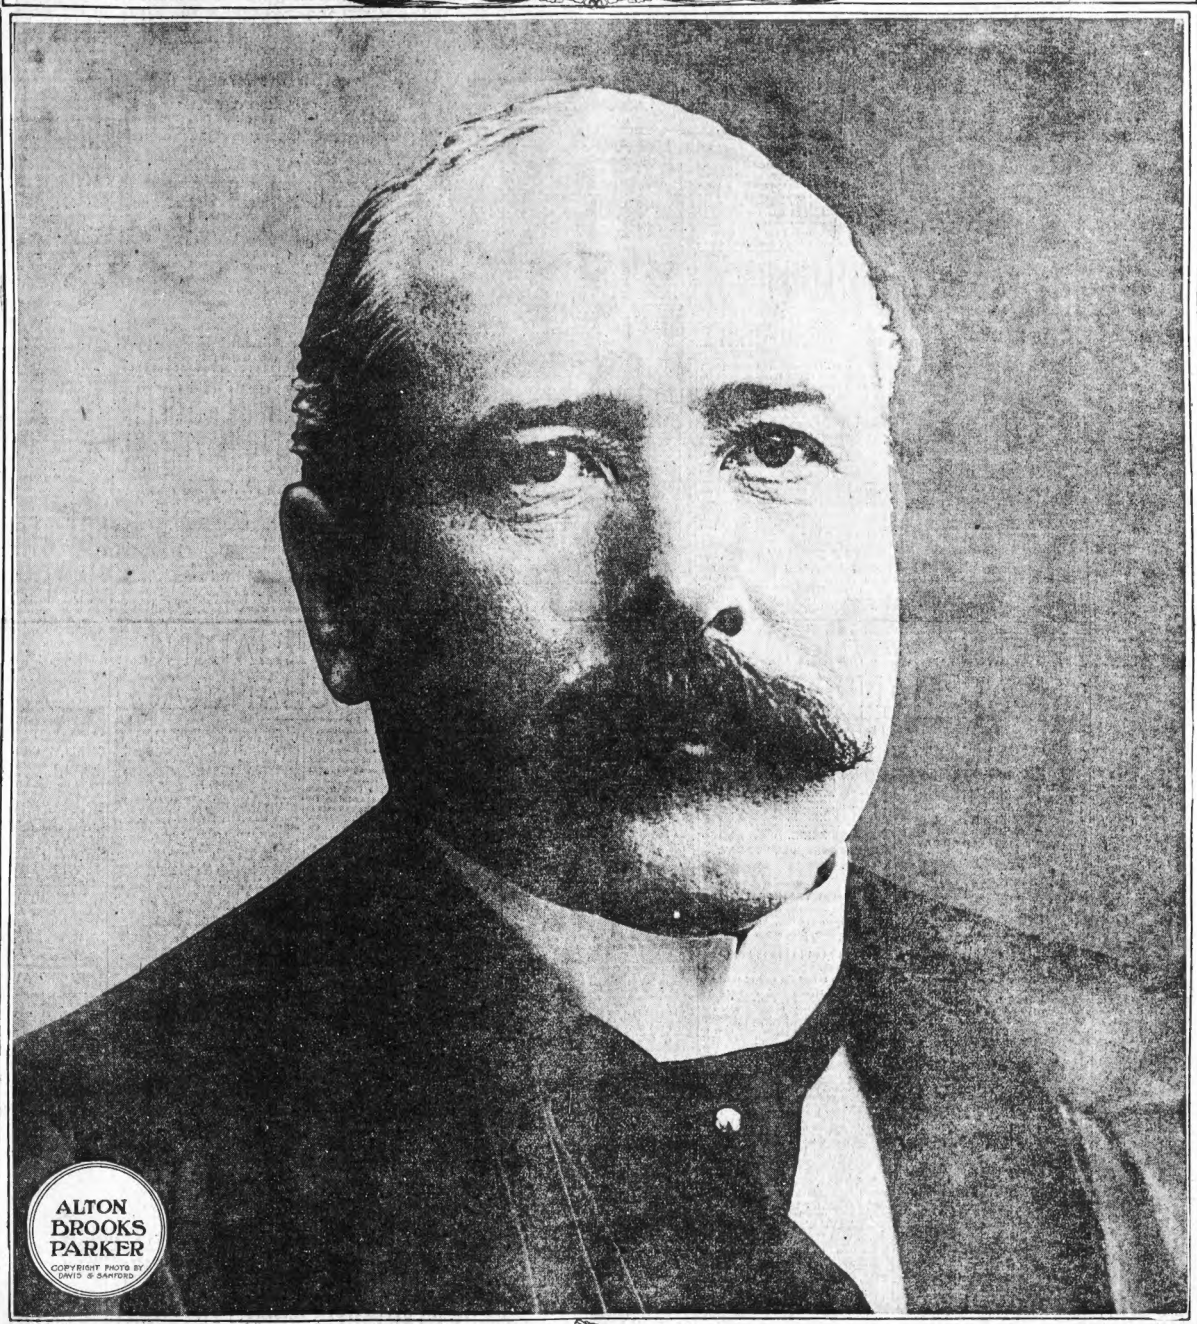
ALTON BROOKS PARKER,

Democratic Nominee for the Presidency of the United States.



ALTON BROOKS PARKER is Chief Judge of the Court of Appeals of New York, an elective office. He is fifty-two years old. He is of New England descent, his ancestors having settled in this section 300 years ago. He was born in Ulster County, New York, in 1852. His father was John Brooks Parker and his mother Harriet Stratton Parker. His mother still lives, and, although past eighty years of age, is active and mentally alert. The birthplace of Alton Brooks Parker was about four miles from Cortland, N. Y. When he was sixteen years old he was teaching school himself, and studying law. At twenty-one he was admitted to the bar, and two years later was surrogate of Ulster County.

After holding various county offices he was made chairman in 1885 of the Democratic Executive Committee in the State campaign. David B. Hill, then Governor, appointed him to a vacancy on the bench of the Supreme Court of the State. The next year he was elected without opposition to a full term.

In 1897 he was elected Chief Judge of the Court of Appeals. He was strongly urged for the Democratic nomination for Governor two years ago.

Judge Parker's home is at Esopus, N. Y. He has one daughter, Bertha Parker, who is now the wife of the Rev. Charles Mercer Hall, of Kingston, N. Y.

Judge Parker is the antithesis of Theodore Roosevelt. He is not strenuous. He is not warlike. He is not showy. He is peaceable, a home lover, cautious, logical, ultra conservative, secretive and firm.

Judge Parker is not a rich man. He is worth perhaps $50,000. He sleeps less than seven hours of the twenty-four. He is a hard worker. Dickens, Thackeray and Scott are his favorite authors. Thomas Jefferson is his favorite political author.

WHOLE WORLD OF SPORTS COVERED FOR THE BOSTON AMERICAN BY ITS CORPS OF EXPERTS

BIG FIGHTERS NOT ALLOWED TO MEET

Special to the Boston American.

PHILADELPHIA, July 9.—The all-round bout between Bob Fitzsimmons and Jack O'Brien, which was to have taken place at the Philadelphia National League Baseball Park for the benefit of the free fund, was declared off by the management, on account of the action of Mayor Weaver in issuing orders to the police to stop the contest.

The Mayor held that a contest such as was scheduled between Fitzsimmons and O'Brien would be a prize fight, and, therefore, a violation of the law. He warned the management of the affair that he would order the police to arrest the fighters the moment they stepped into the ring.

The first intimation that the fight might be stopped was received by the management after a protest had been filed at the office of the Director of Public Safety, which official is at the head of the Police Department. An explanation was made to the Mayor, who expressed himself as satisfied.

Later in the afternoon, however, he announced he had changed his mind, and would not consent to allow the contest to take place. It is understood that the Mayor's action was taken as a result of the protests received from the Ministerial Association and from other sources.

The news of the Mayor's decision created consternation in the camp of the fighters as well as among the management, as there had been no intimation that the fight was to be interfered with.

The sporting element of New York, Baltimore, Washington and other nearby cities, believing that nothing would occur to prevent the fight, arrived in the city during the day and early evening.

The sporting fraternity is freely criticising the Mayor's action. The patrons of the sport feel that if the Mayor had any intention of stopping the contest he should have done so before the last moment. Up to 2 o'clock in the afternoon 7,000 tickets had been sold, according to the management, and every arrangement had been made to handle a large crowd.

No one felt more disappointed than the principals. For weeks both of them have been in training, working hard to put themselves in condition for the contest.

SAY SCHOLES ISN'T AMATEUR

LONDON, July 9.—Lou Scholes, now that he has won the Diamond Sculls, the English rowing classic, is undergoing the process of investigation that others have been obliged to contend with who entered from the other side of the ocean.

Scholes's amateur standing is doubted by many because his father was and claims to be now a professional athlete, and for that reason the Englishmen are more than likely to declare the younger ineligible to take the prize.

It is not likely that Scholes's case will receive the official investigation attending Tom Eyck's victory, as the former being a Canadian the defeat can be better accepted.

BIKER WILEY AT REVERE

A new amateur bike rider will reach Boston to-day and to-morrow for the big races to-morrow night at Revere. His name is Wiley, and he comes from Buffalo, where he has been defeating all the crack sprinters in that section. During the time Wiley has been in the saddle he has made himself famous by defeating all the best men in the amateur ranks.

He will compete in the ten-mile open at Revere and will meet the pick of the local riders.

CRACK RIDERS FIT FOR FRAY

Such an evenly matched quartet of bikers has not come together for a race this season as will appear at the Readville track to-night in the twenty-five-mile motor paced race. The fives are Stinson, Butler, Mettling and Sulkins, every one being very popular with the followers of the game.

Mettling and Sulkins have a start which makes their chances brighter to win out, as the youngsters are likely to show unlimited speed on an occasion of this kind.

But practice stunts show that there is going to be something doing when the race is on, as the men are in the best of form and ready for the affair this of a fight.

All the amateurs are busy as bees preparing for the mile tandem handicap and the ten mile open. In the latter event is Wiley, the Buffalo whirlwind, and he will find some of the local boys hard to beat before many circuits of the track are covered.

DANDY PRIZE FOR BIKE RUN

This mid-Summer century bike run of the Century Road Club on July 17 is attracting big attention among the jolly wheel cranks. There will be a hot old bunch of riders out to win the souvenir, a blazing sun, finished in blue enamel between the rays and the outer edge. It's a dandy and quite novel those who have seen the goods say. Any one who want the prize should be on hand at the start of any the contests of the day, or Sunday next. They Fred I. Ferreuil, State centurion, will take the party in hand.

CHARGES NOT VERIFIED.

NEW YORK, July 9.—Very little credence is given the reports emanating from Boston that charges of professionalism have been brought against Ray Mitchell for taking money in swimming races at the beaches around New York, and thereby giving rise to the question of his amateur standing.

NEW YORK PLAYERS "DOPING" IT OUT HOW TO BEAT THE BOSTON CHAMPS

ELBERFELD. M'GUIRE. CLARKSON. GRIFFITH.

M'GUIRE. A BOSTON AMERICAN photographer "caught" four of the New York American League club's players before the opening game with the Champions. They were evidently doing their best to figure out how to beat Collins's men. So far their plans haven't turned out very well.

BORDER KINGS WANT GAMES. Border Kings want games with 16-and-old clubs. A. Willis, manager, No. 80 Border street, East Boston.

HOFFMAN IN BAD SHAPE

"It was one of the queerest sensations I ever had," said Harry Hoffman, the Philadelphia right fielder, who was left behind at the Quincy House when the team went home. He made reference to the game in the last series of the champions when he was struck on the head by one of Tannehill's fast shoots and rendered unconscious.

As a result Hoffman's left eye is almost blind and the whole left side of his face is paralyzed. Hoffman said that he was completely fooled by one of Tannehill's curves, thinking it was an inshoot when it went out, and, being a left-hand hitter, he met the ball squarely.

Hoffman will probably leave for Quakertown to-morrow, as he has recovered sufficiently to travel, and Connie Mack is anxious to see if he will be able to play shortly, as the team is badly crippled.

HOLT TO PLAY AMES.

PROVIDENCE, July 9.—In the final round of the tennis tourney of the Agawam Hunt Club to-day, H. L. Holt, of Longwood, will meet J. O. Ames, of this city.

M'NALLY'S DEFI TO JIMMY BURKE

Special to the Boston American.

FALL RIVER, July 9.—If Jimmy Burke, of Lawrence, wants a match at 128-128 pounds, ringside, K. J. Jackson, of this city, who handles Joe McNally, a clever lad with the mitts, says McNally will fight and allow the Lawrence lad the same conditions, so long as the weight goes advertised.

"If the battle is held out of the old Bay State I will make a side bet, $50, and winner to take all," says Jackson. "This offer stands to any man in New England of not more than 128, ringside, Mahoney or Pierce's stable preferred," declares Jackson.

HERMIS WON'T START IN BIG RACE TO-DAY

NEW YORK, July 9.—Three men of anxious mien and tense expression walked out on the Brighton Beach course after the last race yesterday and strolled through the quarter-way and then up around through the long back stretch. They were Jack Joyner, Enoch Wishard and John W. Rodgers, trainers, respectively, of Water Boy, Ort Wells and Irish Lad. They kicked the light top soil of the footing on the outside, and scanned the deep, dark-look ing mud next the inside rail.

Mentally they measured the time which will intervene before the field of the Brighton handicap, the richest of all the big Spring handicaps, is called to the post. Then they arrived at a conclusion.

Race-goers will be pleased to know that Joyner thought the footing would be all right for Water Boy. With the fair weather continuing right up to post call, the "Black Diamond Express" is a sure starter. Rodgers thought Irish Lad would go, too, and Wishard thought only of the chances of Ort Wells, for the great three-year-old is to go, rain or shine, according to report.

This is reassuring of the prospect of the greatest race of the year. Hermis and The Parader are the other starters necessary to round out the complement of ten to field out the field over seen fronting a barrier in this country.

But a short time has been disquietment of the entire turf world the son of Hermis will not start. No one regrets this more than Mr. Thomas himself. The popular owner called in several veterinary experts yesterday afternoon, and after a most critical examination it was deemed advisable to withdraw Hermis. Entering that is severe ordeal such as the Brighton is sure to be might result in a permanent breakdown.

Experts look to see the race run in 2:03 flat, which, of course, means the most marvelous speed yet seen in competition.

This will be a banner week for all good old Brighton Beach and no mistake. With the exception of the Suburban steeplechase, every race has filled just to the size and style the handicappers like. With only a fair break the ground players should get the money to-day. It looks like a starter Hildebrand day, for the great lightweight has a set of choice mounts awaiting him this afternoon.

The entries for the big race are:

FOURTH RACE—Brighton handicap: one and one-quarter miles.

Ort Wells	124
Irish Lad	127
Waterboy	128
Maj. Daingerfield	124
Hermis	95
Couple Hermis, St. Valentine and Palmbearer, Thomas entry.

Water Boy	124
Eugenia Burch	110
St. Valentine	92
Palmbearer	85
Broadhurst	104

HOT ATHLETE IS NEW CAPTAIN

That popular Dorchester boy, Roger Clapp, was elected captain of the crack Dorchester High School team at a meet season. Clapp played fast football and basketball, as well as being a member of the hockey team.

Before entering Dorchester High the new captain played with the English High School team, captaining the nine. He is a strong third baseman, very fast coming in on bunts, is a sure thrower, a safe hitter and his friends say is sure to turn out a winning nine for Dorchester High.

CAHILL'S CHIRP TO ROUSE.

With one decision against him Young Cahill of Roxbury, whose handler is "Shy" Clapp of the Highlands, writes to the BOSTON AMERICAN he wants a return match with Rouse of Brighton of South Boston before the Cambridge A. A. Cahill says he Rouse ten rounds, as he has not the best of them, fighting the entire ten rounds. Rough he lost once. Cahill will be any where the club may name accompanied by Clapp England and wants particularly to meet the winner of the battle between Young Sheehan at the Webster A. C., says Shy, who isn't a bit backward in boosting his clever young protege.

MISS SUTTON FAVORITE.

NEW YORK, July 9.—In the King's County tennis tourney, Miss Sutton, the California expert, is the favorite for winning the first prize in the women's singles. She covered an easy victory in straight sets over Miss Risch.

RACING AT READVILLE.

At the Readville track this afternoon the harness races of the Gentlemen's Driving Club, of Boston, will be decided. Several events were on the card, but were postponed on account of a wet track.

From a Boston American Staff Correspondent with the Team.

NEW YORK, July 9.—To use a stage expression, there was "nothing doing" at the Marlborough this morning, where the Boston Champs are stopping. The players remained indoors and exchanged stories. In fact, it was the deadest forenoon period of the week. The boys did not venture outdoors at all. Probably the fact that the game starts earlier than usual to-day kept them inside.

Nevertheless, there was a good deal of jollying among the players. George Lachance made a big hit this morning when he appeared among the bunch attired in a handsome lime serge suit.

"Hobe" Ferris, the club's best kidder started immediately at him. "It's about time you married the girl," exclaimed Ferris.

George blushed like a schoolgirl, and tried to make his friends believe that he was going down to Waterbury to-night to visit his folks. That was why he was all dressed up.

"Well, you could change your clothes to-night, could you?" essayed Hobe, "without letting all of us poor guys envy your swell togs."

Soon, with a chuckle as a parting salute, Lachance went out of the hotel. About ten minutes later he came back wearing a white carnation as a boutonniere. As soon as he reached the clerk's desk to get the key of his room, Ferris dashed up to him, grasped the flower from his coat, dipped it into the ink well and then offered it to "Candy." He shouted as he held the flower in his hand: "Take this, Tom Corbett, and let it teach you never to deal in 'flower' stocks without letting us in on the game, or I'll have you and your anything you may have. So there, you lambs," he said, as he dropped the flower on the desk, at the same time running away to keep out of the way of the irate Lachance.

The Boston players have to leave the Marlborough every day at 1 o'clock in order to have time to get out to the grounds and dress. The ride out to the Washington Heights park takes at least an hour.

It is late when the players get back to the hotel after dinner. When they have finished their meal it is 8 o'clock, so they do not have much time to go anywhere in the evening.

There should be some hot times on the campus of the Highlanders this afternoon. It looks as though Young and Jack Chesbro were to be the box artists.

The New Yorkers are not feeling kindly toward the Bostons on account of two bad umpiring the latter rendered them. Dinneen is out for revenge because of that Thursday walloping, while Young wants to get even for the whalings he has received from the New Yorks this season.

George Winter had crack little youngster of the Boston pitching staff, is an earnest worker. He takes the best of care of himself, and usually is in fine pitching form.

Two years ago he was taken down with typhoid fever, and has not yet recovered his full strength. When he first joined the American staff back in 1901 he was possessed of remarkable endurance powers. There was a day against Washington, in the first season of the American League, when Ted Lewis, Mitchell (now with the Quakers) and Young were the rest of the staff. He had to twirl two games in one afternoon.

Mitchell in the first inning was hammered out of the box. Collins asked George if he could stand the gaff for two games. He did so, and came out victorious in both contests. This was only one of the many instances which showed he had the right stuff in him, despite his small stature.

A big gathering of local fans is expected up at the Harlem grounds to-day, as the 200 Hub-faithful rooters will do their best to let their friends remember that they have friends, too.

HOT SHOTS FOR FARRELL

Some of the local ring gents evidently don't think much of the choppy works and challenge of Charley Farrell, a heavyweight boxer, who was Fitz's sparring partner at the old Howard once.

Farrell offered to fight Mike Shallow, now in St. Johns, a hard-hitting amateur who won many gold medals for his scrapping joys against all comers at the Boston A. A., Bounoke A. C., Shawmut Boat Club and other live local athletic clubs.

As Farrell barred none of the good ones in New England, here's a few breezy chirps from Steve O'Donnell, the Harvard boxing instructor, Terry McGrirl and one signed Ike Weir, even, the famous old "Belfast Spider," who says: "You can and men at any time to meet Charley Farrell. I mean what I say. Money no object."

O'Donnell says:

"I will get a good man to fight that club Charley Farrell. I will back my man for a thousand dollars. I mean what I say. My man is a light heavyweight, say 160 pounds, and is only an amateur. I will put up the money at any moment you say, and will make a side bet of $1,000 that my man will put him in a trance in less than two rounds."

From Terry McGrell, who gives his address as No. 41 Melrose street, comes:

"In reply to Charley Farrell, the boxer who challenges any man of his weight to box or fight, I beg to answer his challenge. I will fight him for fun or doughnuts, and will put up $250 and place it in anybody's hands you say. I can give Farrell the big end in big time."

If so clever Farrell will have many other takers on that his challenge in the BOSTON AMERICAN was read by all the ring fans of the good old Hub.

LASCA IS LEADING IN OCEAN RACE

Special to the Boston American.

EASTERN YACHT CLUB HOUSE, MARBLEHEAD NECK, July 9.—At last, after more than sixty hours of uncertainty, news of the yachts in the ocean race from New York here has been received.

Highland Light, on Cape Cod, reports that at 9:21 o'clock this morning the schooner Lasca, one of the largest boats in the race, passed that point. Twenty-five minutes later the schooner Corona, the largest boat in the fleet of ten that started from Rockaway Inlet for Marblehead on Wednesday afternoon, passed Highland Light. The wind at that time was blowing sixteen knots an hour from the southeast. At that rate, with the wind aloft, the first two big schooner yachts ought to make the run to Marblehead harbor in quick time and get in to-day.

The news that Highland Light this morning is the first that has been received of the yachts since they started on the race. Though preparations had been made for them to report as they rounded the Nantucket Shoal Lightship, no word of any kind has been received from that quarter, according to the rules of the race, no yacht was to be counted which did not report as it passed Nantucket, but heavy fogs have prevailed in the last few days, and doubtless, under the circumstances, the club will not enforce this rule.

Up to noon none of the sloops and yawls which started in the race had been reported.

HIGHLAND LIGHT, July 9, noon.—At last definite news has been obtained from the yachts in the ocean race between New York and Marblehead.

The Lasca, one of the two schooner yachts, was sighted at 9:20 and the Corona followed at 9:25a.m.

From the position of the two boats the Lasca has a big lead on its rival, as its time allowance on the Corona is 2 hours 47 minutes and 30 seconds. Both belong to the New York Yacht Club.

ALL DASH RACES IN HARNESS MEETS

NEW YORK, July 9.—A radical change in the conduct of trotting races has been made by the management of the two grand circuit meetings, to be held in New York at the Empire and Brighton Beach tracks, August 8 to 20. Although the tendency in trotting has been to eliminate the old three in five plan, the circuit meetings in New York will be the first at which all the races will be dashes.

The sum of $100,000 is offered for the two weeks' competition, and under the dash system five or six opportunities will be offered during the meetings to trotters and pacers with records ranging from 2:05 to 2:30.

Although there are a few objections to the dash system in fight harness horse sport, they are more than overshadowed by the many advantages accruing from the conduct of racing on a short system plan. There was a day against Washington, in the first season of the American League, when Ted Lewis, Mitchell (now with the Quakers) and Young were the rest of the staff. He had to twirl two games in one afternoon.

Mitchell in the first inning was hammered out of the box. Collins asked George if he could stand the gaff for two games. He did so, and came out victorious in both contests. This was only one of the many instances which showed he had the right stuff in him, despite his small stature.

A big gathering of local fans is expected up at the Harlem grounds to-day, as the 200 Hub-faithful rooters will do their best to let their friends remember that they have friends, too.

THIS OLD BOY SET FAST PACE

To his fine constitution, due to hard training two decades ago for struggles on the water, and to his present day, an old-time Irish runner, ascribes his success in escaping through flames and smoke from death at the big Charlestown grain elevator fire.

Dacey who in 1888 made a record of two miles in 9 m. 43 s., was one of the survivors of the burning steamer Austrian.

When it is recalled, Alec Grant last year only set the A. A. U. two mile mark at 9 m. 27 4-5 s. at Milwaukee, it will be seen that there old boys like Dacey, without the splendid training appliances of the present day, need to go down the line in speedy fashion.

LIVE LYNN FANS WANT N. E. BALL

Special to the Boston American.

LYNN, July 9.—Baseball fans of this city hope to see the Nashua Club transferred to Lynn to play at Glenmore Park, under the management of Ben Walitt, the old-time player and manager, in opposition to the Lynn Association team of Leonard's.

As the game at Glenmore have been all to the good, and several thousand fans have come through to see the fine sport shown, it is believed the Shoe City rooters would come through strong to see fast New England League ball.

Besides Manager Walitt's offer of a charity series, no move has yet been made by Manager Leonard to accept a challenge made by the Lynn Baseball Club

Amateur Games Wanted.

Forest Hills want a game away from home to-day with some strong professional team. R. W. Moore, manager, telephone No. 21 60 Malden, or No. 8 Hyde Park avenue, Forest Hills.

GREAT RECORD FOR MERCEDES, MOTOR BOAT

MARBLEHEAD, July 9.—Dashing through the water at express speed, the motor boat Mercedes, the latest production of Packard & Burgess, the big yacht designers, established a world's record over the Eastern Yacht Club measured course, covering 24⅞ miles in the hour. The former record was 23½ miles by the Trefle-a-Quatre at Nice, two months ago.

There were five people on board on the test, including the owner, Herbert L. Bowden, and the designers, and only three are required in racing forms.

The Mercedes will be entered in the motor races of the Eastern Y. C. next week, when it is hoped that some of the New York cracks will be on hand in order to give the makers of the Mercedes a chance to prove superiority in producing the fastest craft.

PRAY WILL TRY FOR NEW MARK

Out for long distance walking laurels, Harry C. Pray, a Roxbury boy, who has covered more than 500 miles in square heel-and-toe spins this year, will walk from Worcester to Boston tomorrow, starting from the Worcester depot and finishing at the State House.

Pray, who will have a couple of attendants on bikes with him, will start at 10 a. m. and he expects to cover the 44 miles in less than nine hours.

Two Worcester boys last year did the stunt in 9 hours 35 minutes, but Pray says they walked from the heart of the Commonwealth to the Sacred Coddish, which is all down grade, while he went through from the Hub to Worcester in 10 hours 35 minutes, an uphill walk.

"My biggest walk was on Washington's Birthday from the Hub to Portsmouth, N. H., which I did in 10 hours 58 minutes through snow drifts," said Pray, who is a cigar cutter, who enjoys the outdoor big walks for time honors.

O'KEEFE HAS THE MONEY

CHICAGO, July 9.—Jack O'Keefe, the Chicago lightweight, is after trouble with either Jimmy Gardner, of Lowell, or Joe Jans, the lightweight champion.

O'Keefe will fight either man at 138 pounds for six to twenty rounds before the club offering the best inducements, winner take all. If they agree to these terms he will post $1,000 to bind the match.

ORT WELLS, WHO WILL RUN IN TO-DAY'S $25,000 BRIGHTON HANDICAP

FAST BANTAMS PUT UP SIX GOOD ROUNDS

Special to the Boston American.

PHILADELPHIA, July 8.—After bleeding and fighting for nearly a year, Danny Dougherty and Tommy Love, two of the cleverest bantams in the country, met in the ring before the Manhattan Athletic Club, and at the end of the sixth round neither boy had anything on the other.

The bout was fast and extremely clever at times. Love forced the milling in the first part with his jabs, but Dougherty, gradually warming up as the bout progressed, fought in cyclonic fashion in the fifth and sixth rounds, easily evening up what advantage Love had secured in the fore part of the go.

The boys had agreed to weigh in at 122 pounds in the ring. Love just made the weight, while Dougherty only brought the beam down to 116 pounds.

In the semi-windup, Kid Williams had the best of Terry Martin after six fast rounds. In the preliminaries Kid Stanger and Young Kilpatrick boxed a draw. Morris Goldby was defeated by Kid Geber, while George Walker had the best of Frank Bradley.

QUAKER LAD READY FOR JIG

Special to the Boston American.

MANCHESTER, N. H., July 9.—That scrappy little Bunker Hill boy, Jig Stone, who says Jimmy Briggs declined to meet him here before the Queen City A. C., because he feared a sleep jolt from Stone, arrived to-day with his trainers to put the finishing touches on a before his big bout on Monday night with Bilnk McClosky, of Philadelphia.

Blink has been here for a week, working out daily, and is in the best shape ever, he says, for Stone, who looks like a rugged customer for the Quaker lad.

"I'll win from McClosky sure," said Stone, "though I know he's a pretty good boy. But I'll take no chances of getting licked if hard road work and sparring stunts between now and the bout will get me right," said the Boston chap. "If I beat Blink I'll keep after Briggs then till he agrees to fight me at 130 or 133 pounds, before any clubs in the country," declared Jig to a bunch of admirers. "There'll be the biggest house of ring fans of the season out at that fine, cool Lake Massebesic arena to see the lively scrap promised between McClosky and Stone.

Several tuneup preliims will be put on, and a big bunch of Boston sports will be on hand to see the main event. Much money has been wagered on the outcome here, in the Hub, and at Portland, where Blink's victory over Bart Connolly, the pride of the Pine Tree State, won the Philadelphian many friends.

KID GRIFFO BUSY BOY

NEW YORK, July 9.—Kid Griffo, the Brooklyn lightweight, will be a busy boxer from now until the last of this month if all the matches that he has on go through.

His first will be with Dave Holly, the Philadelphia lightweight, on July 15, in Philadelphia. Then come Shadow Morris, the Jersey lightweight, in private a week later, and Seymour Singer, the Philadelphia lightweight, whom he goes in private in this city on July 23 for twenty rounds. Griffo has started in to train with Young Gardner, a bantamweight.

AUSTIN MAGUIRE'S CHIRP.

Former champion of New England at speckled weights, Austin Maguire, Lowell, writes to the BOSTON AMERICAN he stands ready to meet any boxer in the country at 126 pounds. Maguire is a good clever lad at 126 pounds, and should make one of the cheapest youngsters at that pace to win if any of them agree to face him.

GALA GOODS FOR OLD BOYS

It will be the gala goods for those who attend the Oldtime Wheelmen's Meet and Outing on the Metropolitan Park Reservation at Atlantic on the shores of Quincy Bay, July 30. Word has been received from many different towns the old boys are going to send big delegations to this meet, and there is no doubt from 2,000 to 3,000 vets of the wheel will be present.

There will be a baseball game and other athletic events, tub races, swimming matches, etc., for which prizes will be offered, a list of which will be published next week. Entries are already being received fast and close on July 20.

Electric cars can be taken by those who do not care to ride the wheel to Neponset Bridge, and then it is about a half mile to the grounds, a beautiful spot with a fine view of Boston Harbor and Quincy Bay and a good restful place to spend an afternoon, as well as to see the sports and have a good time. Captain Peck has made arrangements for some of those who attend to go out sailing in sailboat and launches. There will be a good moon, and those who care to can ride home by moonlight.

CORBETT IS OUT OF GAME FOR MONTH

ST. LOUIS, July 9.—President Robison, of the St. Louis club, is anxious to get another pitcher for his team, as he feels that with one more twirler to help out his present pitching staff he will have no trouble in getting into a good position with the Cardinals by the end of the season.

What worries Mr. Robison more than anything else is the fact that Joe Corbett, especially the highest priced pitcher in baseball to-day, is unable to give the team anything like the service his salary calls for. The trouble with Corbett is a sort of rheumatism in the muscles of his back. He prevents him showing the form that he had when he pitched on the Pacific coast last year, and makes him look an ordinary twirler when he gets into the box, instead of a star artist who is drawing $8,000 for a season's work of twenty-six weeks. It will be at least a month before Corbett will be able to show his true form, and during that time may a defeat may be charged against him.

Mr. Robison was anxious to get Elliott from the Cincinnati club at the time he was placed on the market, with the proviso that he might be returned to the Reds with a sixty-day trial, provided, of course, his work was not satisfactory during that time. The New York club's offer for Elliott was met by St. Louis, but, unfortunately, it came after the deal with the Giant management had been closed, else the big fellow might have landed in this city instead of going to strengthen the Giants.

Manager Nichols, of the St. Louis team, by the way, thinks exceedingly well of Elliott.

"He pitched a good game against us in the Spring," said Nichols, "and downed us fairly. I believe that he could be developed into a first-class man, although he still has much to learn."

As Nichols is a past master in the art of pitching, there is no doubt that he would have made a first-class twirler out of Elliott, if such a thing is possible. As the big fellow will get lots of work with New York, his ability soon will come to the surface or be proven not to exist.

HORSES READY TO SPEED AT NARRAGANSETT

Special to the Boston American.

PROVIDENCE, R. I., July 8.—In fine form and ready to race the advance guard of the harness horses that will take part in the Narragansett Park meet July 12 to 16 has arrived.

The first of the newcomers came in a special express car last evening from New Jersey. There were thirteen head of horses in this string from New Jersey and New York state. J. H. Wilson, of Goshen, N. Y., brings Indiana John and Ruby Electrific, who will start Tuesday and Wednesday. Mr. Wilson, better known as Hooker Wilson, came himself in advance of the horses and made arrangements for their accommodation.

George O. Smith, of Goshen, has arrived with Upset Wilkes, a starter in the 2.10 trot, and Sunlight Chimes, one of the entries in the 2.22 pace. H. F. Satterthwait, of Bordentown, N. J., has Alta Ford, Azure and Miss Emma. The Pleasure Stables have sent two head from Paterson, N. J.—Allori and Prince Conroy.

Another which will arrive is the stable of Francisco brothers, Little Falls, N. J., including Clarice, half sister to the great Charlie Herr, and others. Crowds of people are making their headquarters at the Cranston station watching the process of unloading the horses which will make things interesting in the races next week.

TERRY McGOVERN IS INDEPENDENT

NEW YORK, July 9.—If Sam Harris sticks to his word there will be no fight between Terry McGovern and "Young Corbett" until October, or perhaps later. Harris declared yesterday that he had decided to let Terry fight Eddie Haulon, with whom he is matched, and that McGovern would not face any other boxer until this contest is decided.

According to present plans, McGovern and Haulon are not to come together until September in San Francisco. Naturally, whether he wins or loses, McGovern would not be able to take on "Corbett" until at least three weeks after that scrap.

Of course, Haulon's match with McGovern will not be held should the former be defeated by "Battling" Nelson, whom he is scheduled to fight in San Francisco this month. In such event McGovern would be able to fight "Corbett" before October, but Terry says this would be impossible, as he does not care to train in warm weather.

There is some talk of matching "Corbett" with Dave Holly, the Philadelphia negro, who recently fought Joe Gans. Holly is much heavier than "Corbett," but as he is an excellent drawing card "Corbett" may decide to tackle him.

SIDNEY WANTS BURKE TO FIGHT

That clever little West End boxer, Young Sidney, and his manager called at the BOSTON AMERICAN and stated that he is ready to match against Jimmy Burke, the hard-hitting Lawrence lightweight, or Young Donohue, who recently bested Johnny Burdick before the Cambridge A. A.

"I'll fight Burke and let him name his own weight and the terms to suit himself," says Sidney, "so he looks in fine shape for husky doings with Burke or any of the other crack boxers of the old Bay State.

FINUCANE DEFI TO M'CLELLAND

By Boston American Leased Wire.

CHICAGO, July 9.—It is doubtful if Tommy Mowatt, the "Fighting Conductor," will battle with Billy Finucane again next week.

It was given out that Mowatt received such a drubbing in their last bout Paddy Quail wouldn't let the Hoodlumville boy one through till he was himself again.

As Finucane has visions of meeting Young Corbett or Jimmy Britt some day, his manager, Paddy Ryan, says he will probably match Finucane against Jack McClelland at the American A. C. soon.

WANTS TO SEE DIXIE KID

Special to the Boston American.

NEW YORK, July 9.—The Admiral Athletic Club, of Newport, O., is trying to get Mike Schreck and "Dixie Kid" together for a bout during the Elks' reunion in Cincinnati this month. If Schreck is unable to accept the offer the club will make an effort to get "Twin Jack" Sullivan to face Dixie.

"KID" WANTS ANOTHER GO

NEW YORK, July 9.—Kid Coffey, the Brooklyn lightweight who recently fought George McFadden a fifteen-round draw, is out after another match with McFadden.

Coffey believes that if he can get another chance he can beat the tough New Yorker. He is open to take on any top-notchers at 136 or 138 pounds should McFadden sidestep his defi.

YOUNG ALLEN'S DEFI.

After issuing a strong defi to both boxers, Young Allen, a clever South End boxer, comes to the BOSTON AMERICAN as follows: "Hart Connolly or Kid Savage don't want to meet me, so I will agree to take on Chick Monahan, of Brockton, or Artie Cote, of Lewiston, before any club they may name."

JACK 'TWIN' IS AFTER O'BRIEN

Jack (Twin) Sullivan, the New England middleweight, who has been boxing in the West for the past six months with good success, is still on the trail of Jack O'Brien for a return match.

Sullivan is willing to meet the Quaker for twenty rounds at 158 pounds, and will bet him $1,000 that O'Brien cannot stop him again inside of the time. O'Brien is the only man that ever put Sullivan away.

CANOLE HAS TOUGH FIGHT

NEW YORK, July 8.—Martin Canole, the Fall River lightweight, and Willie Fitzgerald, Brooklyn's pride, have been matched to meet in the star bout for six rounds at catchweights at the next National A. C. show in Philadelphia on Monday night.

This will be Canole's first appearance in the East since his defeat at the hands of Battling Nelson on the Pacific coast, and his showing with the fighting Brooklyn man will be watched with interest.

NEWPORT AUTO RACES.

NEWPORT, R. I., July 9.—A series of auto races will be held July 30 on Sachuest Beach, a stretch of hard sand two miles long and sixty wide near the cliffs from Newport. Ten events for amateur and professional drivers will be on the programme, and Reggie Vanderbilt, who is the whole committee getting up the affair, is busy completing the details.

POET 10¢ CIGAR NOTHING BETTER

Boston American Woman's Home Magazine

By Mrs. Osborn

SHE DESCRIBES FOR READERS OF THIS PAGE THESE TWO CHARMING SUMMER DRESSES, WHICH SHE DESIGNED.

Pink Dotted Swiss Gown. All Embroidery Dress.

THE gown shown at left of picture is a pink pin-spotted muslin, with a plain, full skirt and a waist made with shirrings to form a yoke. Each row is finished by a bow of black velvet ribbon and a buckle. The sleeves, of three-quarter length, are of two large puffs.

One of the coolest dresses you could have is the one at the right, of all-over coffee-colored embroidery. Both skirt and waist are very plainly made. The bands that cross the shoulders and the deep girdle are of pale blue ribbon. Little rosettes finish them where they end.

The quaint old delaines and patterned muslins of our grandmothers are new again. They are delightful made up with pipings, ruchings and pleatings, the full gauged skirt hanging in graceful folds from waist to feet, the pouching bodice, the elbow sleeves and long shoulder, surmounted by the simple picture hat. Look, too, at the hundred-and-one dainty little accessories you can add to your muslin frock!

SHE COMPARES THE FATE OF A POOR OLD HORSE AND A POOR OLD WIFE, AND SAYS A WOMAN MAY ECONOMIZE TOO MUCH IN HER HUSBAND'S LOVE.

Copyright, 1904, by American-Journal-Examiner.

SEVERAL months ago the following clipping was sent me from an exchange:

GREENVILLE, O.—A prominent and wealthy dry goods merchant of this city put up at public auction yesterday at Davis & North's sale stables his old family driving horse, "Stoney," that he had owned for nearly thirty years. "Stoney" has been a familiar animal on the streets of Greenville—kind, gentle and faithful as a dog. He is now thirty-two years old and was sold by a trader at $21, and immediately sold to Lew Wilson, of Union City, Ind., at $1 profit.

One cannot read the words without a blurring of the eyes and a catch at the heart. At least one who knows anything about the nature of horses. The horse, like the cat, becomes strongly attached to its home. It suffers with intense homesickness when obliged to change locations. Horses taken to new homes rarely eat the food placed before them for the first day or two, or until hunger compels them to break the fast of sorrow.

If the same hand and voice accompany them to the new home they feel less lonely, and sooner settle into the unfamiliar quarters. But when a horse changes homes and masters, after years of service, it is little short of a tragedy.

A swift and painless death is far kinder to an old horse than such a fate as the one recorded above.

The old horse and the old wife of the ambitious and pleasure-loving man—the man without ideals or a keen sense of duty—God pity both of them!

We have all seen the old wife, faded and unattractive, put aside for the younger.

She has helped make her husband's fortune and lost her bloom and beauty in his service. She has reared his children and looked after his interests and pinched and saved to earn the name of a "good economical wife."

The little vanities and frivolities of the sex she has crushed out of her nature, because she wanted to be "saving."

And always she prided herself upon being a faithful, good woman, and it never occurred to her that her loss of youth and beauty could bring a greater loss to her life; she knew she was the helpmeet and comrade of her husband, and she could no more suspect him of faithlessness than she could herself be unfaithful.

Were they not growing old together?

She had not noticed how much younger her husband looked than she—It is the way of some women not to notice those things.

If she did observe his well-preserved, manly charms, she was proud of him—that was all.

And then by and by he began to be less a home man than of old. That was owing to his increased financial responsibilities, she thought. And he had joined several clubs and was popular with men. Of this, too, she was proud.

There are women who are so constant and true by nature that nothing short of brutality can convince them a husband is disloyal in thought or deed.

And so this poor old wife ofttimes is the last person to know when her husband is tired of her, and when he wants a new face at his board, just as he wants a new horse in his stable.

He wants to make a show in the world, to be envied by his neighbors, for his handsome wife and fine equipages.

And then the old horse is sold, and the old wife divorced. God pity them both! In His house are many mansions, and I am sure there are many green pastures, too, where the old horse can roam in freedom and happiness, loved and petted by the old wives of Paradise, perhaps.

The young horse has no reasoning powers to be appealed to regarding his future. He cannot be warned or advised. But the young wife, who has ears to hear and eyes to see the poor old wife of the ambitious man, may take warning and avoid some of her mistakes.

It is a mistake for a wife to obliterate herself and live wholly for her husband and children.

When a woman ceases to care for her own personal appearance, and when she crushes out all feminine tastes and relinquishes all ambitions and desires in order to save money for her husband and her children, she soon grow accustomed to the thought that "Mother does not need to have this, or to do that," and selfishness is the result.

While they love her for her excellent qualities, and in a way appreciate her worth, they place their own desires and needs before hers and accept her devotion as a matter of course.

However fond of his wife a man may be, and however he admires her moral character, he is better pleased when she retains her attraction of person. No matter if he seems to be oblivious to her loss of beauty and to be unaware of her neglected wardrobe, yet when he meets other women who keep in touch with the customs of the day in dress and manners, he mentally compares his wife to her disadvantage. He forgets the cause and remembers only the fact to her disparagement. And when he puts her aside for a more modern woman, many of his acquaintances sympathize with him, and say: "Well, it is no wonder; she was so old-fashioned and not at all companionable for her husband. He is such an up-to-date man."

Economy is a virtue, but it can become a vice with woman or man. To be unworldly is sometimes admirable, and often dangerous. A wife who is wise will keep herself in touch with the world in which her husband moves, and she will keep herself as well appareled and as accomplished as the women of her own station whom he admires.

And she will never efface herself, or become a "door mat" for her family. It is all very well to help a man save money. But at the same time a wise wife will help save herself from becoming a discarded relic in her old age by her zeal to economize. For too often economy of this kind by the wife of a man's youth results only in saving money for the enjoyment of the young wife of his old age.

Brown Mohair Bathing Suit

A PRETTY bathing suit is of brown mohair, trimmed with red, polka-dotted with white. The blouse is made with three box plaits on the front, each showing a piping of red an either side of the plait. The neck is collarless, but trimmed with narrow bands of red, also the belt, sleeve puffs and bottom of the skirt. Another blouse suit is trimmed with white, with three white straps over the hips. There are fetching large collars to be worn with these suits, some of them lace trimmed.

A black bathing suit looks well with the blouse fastening to one side, finished with a wide band of white down the closing. The deep sailor collar is trimmed with the white, while the skirt and belt are all white.

Some of the girls have fitted waist linings, and one featherbone for shaping them, as well as to show the pretty lines of their figures.

Codfish Balls That Look Well.

TO MAKE codfish balls that are good to eat and to look upon, too, use one-fourth shredded fish to three-fourths hot mashed potatoes; mix well, season to taste with cayenne pepper, shape into balls, dip into beaten egg, dredge with bread-crumbs, and fry a light brown in deep fat.

Advice to the Lovelorn

BY BEATRICE FAIRFAX

DEAR MISS FAIRFAX:

I am deeply in love with a very beautiful young lady with very winning ways. Until about two weeks ago I think she liked me, but I got very jealous because she went out with another fellow, and sent for my ring, and said I never wanted to see her again. I am sorry I did it now and wish to know what to do. Shall I write to her how sorry I am or see her in private?

LOVESICK E. C.

You were too hasty in demanding your ring, and may have a very hard time winning her back again. The best thing you can do is to arrange to see her at once and apologize for your action and possibly she will forgive you, if she cares for you still.

DEAR MISS FAIRFAX:

I am a young man about twenty-four. Six months ago I met a girl of twenty and we have been going together ever since. A week ago we had a quarrel. I wanted to make up, but she said she liked me, but wished to give me up. Can you explain this for me? I love her dearly and feel I cannot give her up.

REJECTED.

Boston.

I AM afraid she has ceased to care for you. You should not let these quarrels come up. Probably you were to blame for it, and that is the reason why she does not wish to keep company with you. But if she still likes you a little you need not give him up entirely. Keep on trying to win her back and avoid foolish quarrels and you will probably succeed.

DEAR MISS FAIRFAX:

I have been keeping company with a young lady for three years, and do not love the girl enough to marry her, although she loves me dearly. My parents do not approve of my keeping company with her; therefore, we are engaged, and I do not know what to do, as I can break the engagement. Kindly advise me. Heartbroken.

R. S.

IF you do not love the young lady, you should tell her so at once, and then let her alone. I cannot see why you let matters go so far. You have done a very wrong thing in allowing yourself to become engaged to her, and the only honorable course left open for you now is to let her know at once how you feel toward her. First be absolutely sure that you are doing this of your own free will, and not because your parents wish it.

DEAR MISS FAIRFAX:

I am about eighteen years old and the young man I love is a year younger. Sometimes he is very affectionate and at other times he acts very cool toward me. The question is—how can I tell whether he loves me or not?

Newburyport.

IF this young man cares for you he will show it by his actions. Do not try to find out by being over affectionate with him yourself. It will only cheapen you in his eyes. It may be because he feels so sure of our love that he acts this way.

THE WISH TO "BE A BOY" DOESN'T LAST.

Editor Woman's Page, BOSTON AMERICAN:

How uncomfortable some of these college professors are and how annoyed and troubled they would make us older women, if we believed all they say. But has any mother ever worried or begun to fear her girl was going to be bad because she wished she were a boy. President G. Stanley Hall is reported to have said High School girls actually wish they were boys, as though the thing was absolutely sinful.

Does any mother feel that her daughter is losing her delicacy when she makes an exclamation like this? I would like to hear from them. For my part, I sympathize with the girls who see their boy friends unhampered and free, going and doing whatever they like, and I understand the desire for independence that actuates them to exclaim: "I wish I were a boy." Such a sentiment does not hold. When the right boy comes along, or as she grows, even if the right man never appears, the educated woman finds her proper sphere and forgets the youthful thought that "it is nice to be a boy."

WANTS PICTURES OF THE PRETTIEST BABIES.

Editor Woman's Page, BOSTON AMERICAN:

Do you think women are interested in seeing pictures of other women who are pretty, or supposed to be? If you are, here is a request that I make, and I do not understand women. It's all very well to print a lot of pictures of pretty girls and pretty babies, but if these is the fundamental no one would vote but the men, because I guess every man does, too, although they all say they can't tell them apart. But that's affectation. I know some babies that would stand a pretty good chance for the prize. And there are others.

HERE IS THE "INSIDE SEAT" MONOPOLIST.

Editor Woman's Page, BOSTON AMERICAN:

For more than one year I have wanted to have my say about men and their selfishness. Every one who reads a newspaper or magazine has heard of the "end seat hog." That's the trolley car rider. But did any one ever voice her sentiments about the inside seat monopolist on the steam cars? I am honestly anxious to know if other people have had any such provoking evidences of selfishness as I have seen? Surely other commuters have noticed how the men get on the train first, seek the shady side, and get next to the window, either to get the air or to rest their elbows on the sill. The inside seat is restful, I think we will all admit. But few of us women have the joy of using it, unless we are traveling when few men are. They are keen and swift to get aboard a train early and to secure the inside seat. They don't take the inside seat on an open trolley car. Every man wants an isle seat at a theatre, and if he happens to go to church he sticks to the end of the pew and makes every one else crowd past him.

HONOR THE VETERANS.

Editor BOSTON AMERICAN:

When the old veterans of the Civil War meet in Boston for the annual national encampment during next August I hope that the citizens of Boston will show enough patriotic spirit to decorate their houses with the national colors and show all due respect to the men who fought for the preservation of the country.

It is every person's duty to show their appreciation in some way. There are but a few years left to honor those who suffered hardships for the nation during that memorable strife. Each year sees scores of the old warriors dropping off and the Grand Army of the Republic will be a thing of the past in a few years as far as the men themselves are concerned. Let all who are able to do so turn out in force and cheer the "Men in Blue" as they march past.

The Editor of Stay-at-home Too Late

Dear Editor,

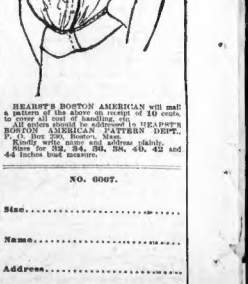
I think the young people nowadays stay up much too late. They go to balls, and get up the next morning with a dull headache and feeling tired and sleepy, are peevish all day. It is said that one hour before twelve is worth two hours after twelve. If the young people would only go to bed early they would rise the next morning refreshed and invigorated. Another thing I wish to speak of is that if on rising early in the morning they would take a cold bath with a brisk rubbing down with a rough towel, I am convinced that they would be amply rewarded for their trouble.

Yours sincerely,
Bertram Forbes. Age 14

HEARST'S BOSTON AMERICAN PATTERN

Ladies' Corset Cover.

One of the newest ideas in under-muslins is the double-breasted corset cover. It is a most useful garment, especially adapted to a man's style dress, as almost every indication of the figure is hidden. The model illustrated here is one of the latest, and has the edge of the corset cover showing through. A smooth piece of linen looks very much like this, too, even the ordinary nainsook, with its fastening of large buttons, the effect is not always so sure, and nothing looks worse than a corset cover that is not smooth. The model is fitted by shoulder seams, and is a most satisfactory model, as it has the desired bias effect over the hips. Arm and over the bust, which features a smooth fit. The neck is cut in a square outline, and is finished by a fold of the same material as the body, and holds the corset cover in position. The edges of this fold are slightly gathered, and a few gathers confine the fullness to the waist in front. With the seaming of the shoulders and sewing the position to the waist, the garment is complete. The pattern is in seven sizes, and might easily be the envy of the queen on the front, or use little bonbon braid for a dainty, quality of nainsook that may be had in dollars. With such a simple trimming, anyone willing to make a few stitches can produce the daintiest kind of lingerie and at very slight expense.



HEARST'S BOSTON AMERICAN will mail a pattern of the above on receipt of 10 cents. To cover all cost of mailing, etc. Write your name and address plainly, and address BOSTON AMERICAN PATTERN DEPT., 11 Pi Box 2200, Boston, Mass.

Kindly write name and address plainly. Sizes for 32, 34, 36, 38, 40, 42 and 44 inches bust measure.

A SENTENCE WITHHELD

Copyright, 1904, by American-Journal-Examiner.

THE house of Mrs. Oliver Gordon had been the scene of many brilliant gatherings during the season that had just closed. The hospitality of her mansion in the October air, and for the genial hostess was as celebrated as that reason Mrs. Gordon and her guests her jewels, and they had created the sensation of the season. A remnant of Summer Oliver Gordon had left for Boston the previous night, with several of the servants, in order to have the city house in readiness for the reception of the wife and guests. Connor, the trusty butler, was left behind to look after the wants of the ladies.

Mrs. Gordon had wound up the season—and her last evening at her Summer home—with a small dinner party of eight, to which were bidden the most intimate of her clique. The time sped rapidly on until the hour for departure, when each guest proclaimed their charming hostess the prince of entertainers.

When the farewells of the evening and Summer were said Mrs. Gordon and her guest, Miss Ralston, went to their different rooms—one to dream of her success in the social leadership of Manchester and the other of moonlight strolls down on the sands. Sleep had not long touched the tired eyelids of Mrs. Gordon before she was awakened by a muffled noise, as of some one stumbling over a chair. A consciousness of impending evil took possession of her. Calling to her friend and receiving a short answer in a tone that gave proof of the truth of her conviction, she hurried to the door of an adjoining room. Standing by her friend's bed, pistol in hand, stood a man whose face was covered by a thick mask. Her blood seemed to congeal. Her first impulse was to touch the button that would summon Connor, but realizing she would be a dead woman if she made even an attempt, she stayed her hand. The bold intruder demanded her jewels, warning her to make no outcry, at the peril of her life. He informed her his confederates were watching the house, and the inmates were wholly at his mercy, but that he would in no way harm them if she acquiesced in his demands. At 2 o'clock (it was then a quarter of) she might give the alarm, but not a minute before.

Although this bold man's words were spoken in an imperative tone, she was impressed even in that awful moment with the depth and ringiness of his voice. And the singular thought passed through her mind, "How could a common thief possess such a voice and such a personality?"

Instinctively she obeyed his command, and opening the secret hiding place she hurriedly took from their hiding place some of the magnificent jewels that had created such talk among the Manchester colony, and was slipping a band of turquoise set in diamonds in his satchel, when Mrs. Gordon found her voice and begged him to leave her that one keepsake, as it was the last gift of her dead mother. The man's voice softened somewhat, and he passed it to her, saying, "You may keep it." He then descended to the dining room, where he and his confederates finished a bottle of wine. And then the clock struck three the men had departed.

Before half an hour had passed all the stations for miles around had been notified and no time was lost in sending detectives in hot pursuit of such daring thieves. The following day the party left for Boston, and when Mr. Gordon was informed of the bold robbery he offered $10,000 for their capture and a large sum in addition for any information bearing directly on them. For weeks Manchester was all astir, and all its citizens were enlisted in the manhunt. A suspect was at last taken, as some jewels belonging to Mrs. Gordon were traced directly to him. The ladies the following morning were summoned to court to identify the prisoner. Handsomely but quietly gowned, Mrs. Gordon and her friend, Miss Ralston, entered the room. All eyes were on them, even those of the suspected man. Judge Collins's voice was heard saying:

"Mrs. Gordon, at this time the man who entered your house the night of October 7?"

"That I could not say, Your Honor," came the words in trembling reply, "as the man wore a mask. I saw nothing of his face."

"If there no way," continued the Judge, "you could identify him? We have reason to think that it is the man, and if he is he should be sent to the penitentiary for his daring act. Was there nothing particular you noticed about him that night?"

"Just one thing," she replied, "his voice—I should know that in a thousand."

The courtroom was astir with queer expectancy, and the Judge rapped loudly for order, which was quickly restored, and the ticking of the clock became audible. Turning to the prisoner, the Judge said:

"What have you to say for yourself?"

Looking fixedly at Mrs. Gordon, with the expression of a hunted animal in his dark eye, he said:

"You wouldn't send a man to the penitentiary on so slight an evidence as a voice?"

Again that tone! The courtroom waited breathlessly for the answer. Quickly the events of that night crowded upon her mind. The request for the dead mother's ring, which was granted, and this when she was in his power!

"You are right. I couldn't send a man to the penitentiary on an evidence so slight."

Four weeks had elapsed when, one morning, Mrs. Gordon and her friend, Miss Ralston, were talking over the strange man and the robbery when Mrs. Gordon had not withdrawn the offer of reward, realizing that Mr. Gordon would have demanded the robber be sentenced; besides, she knew the capture of the real culprit would never now be made, as she herself had exonerated him.

A messenger, who wished to see Mrs. Gordon personally, interrupted the conversation. She stepped into the hall, where a man passed her a note and also a box.

"Read it now," he said hurriedly in a whisper. The note ran as follows:

"Mrs. Oliver Gordon—I have not always led such a life. Your mercy to me at a critical time has made me a better man. God bless you for it!

"A VOICE IN A THOUSAND."

Mrs. Gordon's query for the box contained every piece of the stolen jewelry. Returning to the drawing-room, she said:

"I will tell you now there is no need for further search. The guilty party whose face has been his own accuser!"

She showed the returned jewels, and to this day Boston and Manchester have been wondering who the real thief was.

Mohairs Are Fashionable.

MOHAIRS and mohair etamines were never so fashionable as they are this season and they are seen in all colors and many pretty models made of this material are ideal for travelling and general wear, for they are light in weight, are not easily wrinkled and shed dust quickly. Mohair is also nice for petticoats; the ruffles can be trimmed with lace, narrow ribbon or braid. It is just the skirt that one needs for travelling as well as for country wear. A petticoat of gray mohair looks well with the three narrow ruffles trimmed with narrow black satin ribbon.

THE CHAPERON ON SOCIETY

Miss Alice Roosevelt Will Go Out Little While at Chestnut Hill.

GIVE TIME TO RELATIVES

By the Chaperon.

I can truthfully say that I never saw Miss Alice Roosevelt looking in better health than she is at present. She has a healthy, ruddy glow and a delicious coat of tan, acquired at the North Shore, and her pretty features are made far more attractive by this additional color. She is at the home of the George C. Lees, at Chestnut Hill, you know, having arrived yesterday afternoon. I understand that her stay will be short, however, and that she will leave for Bar Harbor Sunday morning.

Miss Roosevelt was presented this morning a large bouquet of American Beauty roses by her cousin, Miss Alice West, who lives across the street from the Lees.

To-morrow, Miss Roosevelt will attend the little church at Chestnut Hill with her relatives, and will spend the remainder of the day quiety at home.

Her visit here will not be marked by any social display. It is her expressed wish that she have all her time devoted to her grandparents, and I understand that those of her friends who are in the city have conceded to that wish.

They tell me that the luncheon is quite the proper thing to entertain with at Newport this season. Never before in the history of the colony has there been so many luncheons given as there has during the past week, and they have all been very smart affairs. These parties are really simply the forerunners of the big dinners and dinner dances that will be run later in the season, and it looks as if the hosts and hostesses were saving their energies for the big affairs later on.

To-night is to be the big entertainment night of the week, as many of the cottagers are to entertain young parties over Sunday. Many of the colonists will given dinners, which will be followed by music or a trip to Freebody Park for the vaudeville.

Mrs. Stuyvesant Fish arrived to-day and will be one of the many that will entertain with a dinner to-night.

I see that Reggie Vanderbilt has been appointed a committee of one by the Newport Aumement Association to arrange for a series of automobile races to be held on Southwest Beach at Newport later in the season. A number of cups have already been offered and the races will comprise of from seven to ten events.

LODGER FOUND DEAD IN BED.

Frank Polodteniey, a lodger at No. 219 Hanover street, was found dead in his room by a fellow lodger this morning. Polodteniey was thirty-six years of age and had lived at the lodging house for about a year. Death is believed to have been due to natural causes.

HELEN MORTON'S DECREE OF DIVORCE IS SWEEPING

COURT ORDERS RETURN OF HER GIFTS TO DUKE OF VALENCAY.

MISS HELEN MORTON.

Her marriage to French nobleman, Count Talleyrand-Perigord, Duke of Valencay, ended in divorce, with decree for her.

PARIS, July 9.—French society is greatly pleased to learn that Miss Helen Morton, who secured a divorce from her husband, Count Talleyrand-Perigord, Duke of Valencay, last week, has won a greater victory than as at first announced.

Not only did the court throw out the Count's counterssuit, but it annulled the marriage settlement, restored to her the gifts given by her to her husband since the marriage and further upheld the wife's claim by condemning the husband to pay the costs of the divorce suit.

Extraordinary efforts have been made to keep the hearing and the testimony in the case secret.

Counsel for the Duchess in opening the case declared that immediately after the marriage the Duke displayed an incomprehensible coldness toward the Duchess, refusing to go out with her, living constantly alone, and never speaking to her when he could avoid it.

The Duke informed the Duchess that he gave her full liberty to live exactly as she pleased, he proposing to maintain the same liberty of action.

He did not hesitate to use personal violence against her when she persisted in maintaining her status as a wife.

PORTO RICANS KEEP FOLKS UP

Staid Cambridge Objects to Weird Fandangos in Wee Small Hours.

Because the Porto Rican teachers attending the Harvard Summer School persist in playing native airs on flutes and other reed instruments until a late hour every night, the people of Cambridge are up in arms. Along Broadway and Cambridge street, in houses where a dozen or more of the visitors are housed, the Porto Ricans hold informal concerts, where fandangos and other weird airs are played long past the hour when staid Cambridge folks are wont to retire.

Boarding house keepers have held several spirited indignation meetings, and agreed to tell the Porto Ricans that Americans will not permit music to disturb their slumbers during the wee small hours. As the Porto Ricans are very anxious to please their American hosts, it is thought that they will cut the evening concerts short.

Object to Smoking.

Considerable speculation was aroused over the posting of the following notice in front of University Hall, at Harvard, today:

"The men of the Porto Rican Summer School expedition are requested to refrain from smoking on the steps and in the hall ways, as it is annoying to the classes above."

Since the arrival of the Porto Ricans at Harvard the men have walked about the grounds, the hallways and stood on the steps of the various buildings while they were smoking cigarettes. The women gamblers with their fellow students and an effort will be made to have the order enforced.

To-morrow a large number of the visitors will go to Revere, where they are scheduled to spend the greater part of the day.

BODY IN WATER MAY BE REAGAN

The police of station 6 found floating in Fort Point Chanel, this morning, the body of a man which had in one of the coat pockets a postal card addressed to Denis Reagan, No. 299 D street, South Boston.

ALLIED PRINTING TRADES UNION LABEL COUNCIL BOSTON, MASS. 96

NO union bands will take part in the G. A. R. parade on August 10 unless all the music is furnished by members of the Boston Musicians' Protective Association. Secretary of State William M. Olin, who is chairman of the committee on arrangements, has been notified that if any of the regular army bands are permitted to take part, the union men will have to be counted out.

This action on the part of the Boston union is in accordance with a rule recently adopted by the International Federation of Musicians, who claim that the military bands from the forts have competed with union bands.

The Boston union also claims that only one union band was engaged for the East Boston Fourth of July celebration, despite the fact that the city government committee declared itself in favor of union bands.

POLICE PROTECTION.

A detail of police is being furnished the American Tube Works in Somerville owing to the fact that the strike breakers employed by the company fear violence at the hands of the union men who are out on strike. A request for police protection was made by the company yesterday and two officers escorted one of the non-union men, who felt timid, to his home.

Orders have been issued not to permit the strikers to congregate in any numbers in the vicinity of the works.

The union men are much excelled over this move, claiming that it is entirely uncalled for. No violence has taken place so far, and the men say none is threatened.

STRIKERS ACCEPT TERMS.

The terms offered by President Melleu, of the New York, New Haven & Hartford Railroad, to the striking boilermakers have been accepted. Local 281, of Norwood, voted unanimously to return to work.

President Melleu offered a nine-hour day with an increase of 1 1-10 cents per hour for all men who formerly received twenty cents per hour or more. The union asked for a nine-hour day with ten hours' pay. The new scale does not include helpers.

FUND FOR BOYCOTT.

Boston Cigarmakers' Union has voted in favor of the proposed assessment on the membership of the International Union of 10 cents per member for the purpose of raising a fund to fight the anti-boycott laws of Alabama. The membership of the International is 45,000. The union at the meeting held last night indorsed the labors in their fight for the label. They were requested to attend the bakers' picnic at Apollo Gardens.

RIGGERS ELECT OFFICERS.

Riggers' Protective Union No. 10,315 has elected officers as follows: President, Joseph O. White; vice-president, Peter Henningsen; financial secretary, Frank Nason; recording secretary, Frank Logan; treasurer, D. J. Leonard; sergeant-at-arms, A. Anderson; guide, Peter Sternberg; trustees, W. J. Ingram, E. Nickerson, John Edgcom.

LABOR NOTES.

Laundry Workers' Union, No. 60, has installed the newly elected officers. The meeting last night was addressed by Frank E. McGinty, secretary of Boston Central Labor Union, and Dennis D. Driscoll.

During the week of October 10 the convention of the State Branch of the American Federation of Labor will be held in Lasters' Hall, Lynn.

The twenty-two delegates elected by various team drivers' unions of Boston to the international convention at Cincinnati, August 1, will leave at 6 p. m., July 28.

Joseph O. Tuttle has been elected president of Boston Riggers' Protective Union, No. 10,315. A. F. of L. Jr. Logan is the new recording secretary.

For the 1 very-good consecutive term James Timility has been installed president of Paving Department Union, No. 6,751.

With the prospect of a strike by the 78,000 mine workers of the Wilkesbarre district, Superintendent Dryden, of the Scranton Coal Company has written a letter to the mine workers' interpretation of the 10 per cent award, as decided by Umpire Wright. This will be considered by the miners at a meeting of the check docking bosses.

General Secretary-Treasurer Thomas H. Canning, of Washington, will preside at the quarterly convention of District Assembly, No. 30, Knights of Labor, on Sunday, July 17, in Homestead Hall.

The strike of the Havana harbor workers, involving 8,000 men and a dozen different unions, continues. The strikers are quiet.

HEARST'S BOSTON AMERICAN.

WILLIAM RANDOLPH HEARST.

60 AND 62 SUMMER ST., BOSTON, JULY 9, 1904.

The Great Asset of the Republicans.

It Is the Innate Dread of THE UNKNOWN.

Those who work for Republican victory offer many arguments to the people. But the strongest Republican argument lies unspoken in the average man's own mind.

Human beings are afraid of a CHANGE. They fight against giving up that which is, even for a much better thing which is not.

They fought against replacing the stage coach with the locomotive.

They fought against the effort to use steam instead of the wind in moving ships.

They fight every new discovery that prolongs life or preserves life.

Before the BOSTON AMERICAN was started the New York Evening Journal employed a very bright little man, barely out of his teens, named Weiner, in Boston. Mr. Weiner, a genius among newsboys, "handled" the Evening Journal in Boston. He was paid a salary—modest but sufficient.

He was told that, in his own interest and that of the paper, he must give up his salary and work for a commission. The idea was to increase his ambition and his results. Mr. Weiner protested, argued, quoted law, family necessity, faithful service—a million arguments for keeping things as they were.

He had to change, and he made five times as much as he was making before—even ten times as much. He soon had his own wagons, his own diamond pin which sparkled on the darkest night. He married in very high society and the wedding was all that it should be.

Weiner is glad now that he changed from a salary to a commission, but he did not want to change.

And Weiner is like a good many American citizens who, when the time comes, are afraid to vote the Democratic ticket—simply because it means a change.

Mr. Percy R. Todd, Vice-President of the New York, New Haven & Hartford Railroad, invites the firemen of his railroad to dine. He says to them:

"I want to say that there are many indications now that for the next few years hard times are ahead. Business is falling off everywhere. It would be well for your committee to remember that and to reckon with it in asking consideration of claims from the company."

Here is a confession that this man, who represents the Republican party, expects to continue in the present railroad process of discharging men. He tells them to prepare for loss of work, for hard times, not to hope for more money.

When election time comes he will shake a warning finger and ask the workmen if they are prepared to change to the Democratic party.

One single great corporation discharges men ten thousand at a time. Even among those very men there will be found individuals, Democratic at heart, anti-trust at heart, favoring government ownership at heart—yet afraid to vote for their convictions, because Democracy means a change.

This fear of change is an important factor in human nature. It is a good factor, in a way. Men OUGHT to be slow about sudden changes. The good things of this world are accumulated slowly; good laws and good officials are accumulated slowly. We should think very slowly and carefully about CHANGING them.

On the other hand, when we have bad laws, when we have bad officials, when a few men get their hundreds of millions while others are being discharged by the thousands—when "opportunity for all" is distorted into "plutocracy for a few"—certainly the fear of change should no longer influence the strong man.

But, even under the worst of conditions, it does influence many.

That dread of change is the greatest opportunity of the Republican party, whose leaders know that they OUGHT to be put out of office. It is that dread of change, that incapacity to think and act fearlessly, that makes dishonest men feel secure in their dishonesty, and makes cynical politicians laugh at the very classes that they exploit and deceive.

Even the fear of change, however, melts away in the end, in the face of too great wrong. It will be surprising indeed if even the dread of change should save the party of the trusts to-day, when tens of thousands of capable men are discharged simply because trust pressure and high prices have reduced business—when an official of one of the most vicious railroads deliberately tells his men to expect hard times and empty pockets, while THE TREASURY OF HIS RAILROAD IS STUFFED WITH MONEY THAT IT DOES NOT KNOW WHAT TO DO WITH.

IT'S AS OLD AS THE HILLS.

The Stenographer

She Throws a Few Knocks at Indian Givers.

"IF Cupid doesn't give West Juniper the go-by this Summer, I miss my guess," said the Stenographer.

"What's wrong over there?" inquired the Bookkeeper.

"Romeo's squealing that he has been bunced, and asking for a come-back," replied the Stenographer; "a young fellow who was in love with a girl and who gave her a few tokens of his deathless affection had a quarrel with her and sued her for the value of the presents he had made her.

"Isn't that enough to make the little winged god moult all of his pin feathers? But worse is to follow. The Judge and jury actually stood for this moan, and compelled poor Juliet to shell out the shekels and settle an itemized bill for the tender souvenirs that had been laid at her feet."

"It sure does put a crimp in love's young dream," agreed the Bookkeeper.

"Worser," said the Stenographer; it's a death blow. Fancy the feelings of a romantic young thing who suspicions that every time her steady blows her off to a plate of ice cream he is chalking it up on the slate.

"Imagine the joy with which a girl would receive a dinky silverine manicure set in a plush box as a love pledge if she is liable to have to pay for it later on. Think of your sweetheart surprising you with a bunch of American beauties and then giving you the gorgeous surprise of the bill for 'em."

"She might offset his account," suggested the Bookkeeper, professionally, "by running in a counter bill for gas and steam heat and wear and tear on the parlor furniture while entertaining him."

"Right you are," responded the Stenographer; "and let me tell you that the few presents a man parts with to the women he visits don't come anywhere near squaring the gas meter. Of course, it's the long shot papa takes on getting a husband for his darling daughter, but if the girl's beaux paved her way with chocolate creams they wouldn't more than break even."

"D'ye ever notice how hard it is to make a girl give up the engagement ring even after she has sacked the fellow that stood for it?" inquired the Bookkeeper; "you'd think that it would be a sort of a skeleton at the feast business, always reminding her of the faithless lover who had blighted her young life, or the noble and devoted being that she had done dirt to, and you'd think she'd chuck it out of the window just to get rid of it.

"But does she? Nary a chuck. A shinereno, a shinereno is to her, and she freezes on to it for all it is worth."

"That's so," agreed the Stenographer, "and it's about the shortest thing I know of about my sex. I've noticed that in about three-fourths of the cases where two fond hearts beat as one, and the man sends a messenger boy after his ring, the girl comes back with a fairy story about having accidentally dropped the solitaire out of a window, or that it slipped off her finger and down into the drain pipe as she was washing her hands.

"The average woman just can't get over feeling that she ought to keep the engagement ring as a sort of salvage out of the wreck of a broken engagement."

"Being engaged," said the Bookkeeper, "has passed into the automobile and polo pony class of luxuries, anyway. Nobody but a millionaire can afford it."

"Oh, you can always economize on your wife for what you spent on her when she was your sweetheart, you know," suggested the Stenographer, hopefully.

"But the fellow that spraddles around his hard-earned simoleons on a girl and gets turned down is out of luck," pursued the Bookkeeper.

"So he is," assented the Stenographer, "and if a girl is on the dead level her ex-fiancs won't have to send the sheriff or the bill collector around after the presents he has given her. She'll hustle back to him everything that is good for a pawn ticket. But the fellow who is an Indian giver, and whose love tokens have a string tied to them ought to keep his pockets buttoned up in the first place.

"And if he does give and loses, he ought to be a dead game loser. Love-making is no sport for pikers."

BELLE BLITZ.

The Fav'rite Son.

BY JAMES MONTAGUE.

"IN readin' this convention news," said old Si Hanks, "I see
A fav'rite son may stand some show to be the nominee.
I wish I'd knowed of that before, fer then
there boy o' mine
Would fill out that requirement an' step right into line.
He ain't no good to work 'round hum, but there ain't any one
That knows him who'd dispute that he was sure my fav'rite son.

"I've raised that boy jest like a pet; he's riddiated good,
Except in branches that includes farm work an' sawin' wood;
But ev'ry time I try to get a job fer him down town,
The fellers that I go to gin'rily always turns him down.
They say he ain't no good because I've always been hum run;
They want a boy that's learnt to work, an' not no fav'rite son.

"I've wondered fer a year or more just how I could get shet
Of payin' fer the clothes he wears, an' all the things he's et,
En when I see where fav'rite sons was met by crowds an' bands
I thought I saw a fust rate chance to git him off my hands.
If I can reach St. Louis before I—e work is done,
I'll let 'em know that I have got a Al fav'rite son."

"I've raised that boy just like a pet."

WANTS FIREWORKS ORDINANCE CHANGED.

Editor BOSTON AMERICAN:

I agree with F. F. D., when he says, "What did we find on the Fourth? A deadened enthusiasm, and with disgust manifest everywhere." In that he is quite right. If I met one I met twenty who were disgusted. The day seemed like a Sunday, so quiet and dull was it. Yet Judge Emmons is satisfied, but not so the people, who have a stronger love for their country than some who are in high places. When you kill the enthusiasm of the youth of the land, you kill the life of the nation. I am for a change in the city ordinance, so that we may celebrate as is befitting the day.

A NUISANCE THAT HAUNTS THEATRES.

Editor BOSTON AMERICAN:

There is a lot of talk nowadays about the "undesirable hog," but there is another nuisance who is almost as bad. I refer to the man at the theatre who has seen the show before. He is particularly in evidence just now, with two operas in town that are having long runs. He talks continually to the person who has the misfortune to accompany him, and greatly to the annoyance of all in his vicinity. He anticipates every number and tells of everything that is going to happen just before it does. When other subjects fail him he tells all he doesn't know, but thinks he knows, about the people in the company. I wish there was some way of mitigating, or rather suppressing, the nuisance.

ADVANTAGES OF THE END SEAT.

Editor BOSTON AMERICAN:

I do not see that the gentleman who presumes to occupy the end of an unused seat in an electric street car has any champion or bobby defends himself in print, as others assail and insult him. I do not use the very shameful name they apply to him. It disgusts decent people, and degrades any journal that keeps it up. That the gentleman who has this seat and retains it may not feel disgusted and may enjoy his Summer riding, I will just put down what I think are the advantages of the end seat to an open car, and reasons why a man should keep it.

First. It is his seat by priority of occupancy.

Second. It is cooler than sitting between two heated persons.

Third. Has unobstructed view along the highways.

Fourth. A passenger in it can more readily alight from a car.

Fifth. End seater easily makes more room for a man or woman to pass him than a woman can for him.

Sixth. He readily steps out on the running board for ladies to pass out.

Seventh. Saves being lurched forcibly against lady to end seat, in alighting.

Eighth. Is in position to alight quickly and assist ladies and children in case of accident.

Ninth. Saves $100 by being able to expectorate into the street, rather than in the car.

Tenth. Saves the insinuation of other passengers that, "That fellow has got just where he wants to be," should he move to the side of one lady to admit another to his vacated seat. WEYMOUTH HEIGHTS.

ADMIRES FEARLESSNESS.

Editor BOSTON AMERICAN:

I want to express my admiration for your paper and for the way that it is conducted. The great thing about it is that it isn't afraid. The fearless way in which it handles any matter that comes up should commend it to every fair-minded citizen, and if it continues in its present course it will have the support and encouragement of all such. I join heartily with all who have written wishing you good luck.

NOW WHAT D'YE THINK OF THAT?

My wife's great uncle Simon,
Who is fond of mountain climbin',
Wrote and asked us to the Rockies for a week.

He told us in his letter
That he knew of no way better
Of spending time than piking up a peak.

But a second cousin to us,
Who lives out at St. Louis,
Said, "Come on and make a visit, if you like."

So we passed up Uncle Simon,
With his week of mountain climbin',
And spent our time a-peekin' long the Pike.

1. LEANDER: "What do you say, Lulu, to going ashore on that island and sitting on the beach? We will be all alone, far from the world's busy strife, and no one will interrupt us."
LULU: "Oh, Leander, that will be too sweet for anything, and you can fell me all over again how much you love me. We must not stay very long, as I promised mommer I would be back in an hour."

2. LULU: "Oh, Leander, here is Charley Onthespot. Isn't this a surprise? I never thought there'd be a soul on this island."
CHARLEY: "This is indeed a joyful surprise. I have had great luck fishing to-day, but this beats all the luck I ever had in my life."
LEANDER. "Great Scott! If this isn't the limit!"

3. CHARLEY: "Isn't this a good day's catch?"
LULU: "Oh, aren't they lovely? Some day, Charley, you must take me out and teach me to fish."
LEANDER: "Wouldn't that drive you crazy, going into such ecstacies over that bunch of sardines, and now she wants him to take her out and teach her how to fish! Oh, dear! Oh dear!"

4. CHARLEY: "Heavens, Leander, there goes your canoe, and that wind will take it to the other end of the lake in a jiffy."
LULU: "Oh, Leander, how could you be so careless? Why didn't you tie it up fast?"
LEANDER (aside): "Did ever a human being have such woe? I was so flabbergasted when I saw that butter-in that I never dreamt of making the canoe fast."

5. CHARLEY: "My canoe can't hold more than two, Leander, but I will take Lulu ashore and send a man back for you right away."
LULU: "Oh, Charley, what would have happened if you hadn't been here? I shall never forget this day."
LEANDER (aside): "Oh, Fate, why dost thou rub it in!"

6. CHARLEY: "I wish you didn't have to go in so soon, Lulu. I'd like to take you up the whole length of the lake and back."
LULU: "That would be lovely, Charley, and I would do it only mommer is waiting for me at the hotel."
LEANDER: "! ! ! ! ! ! !"
